HOME RULE HIT BY AN ALIEN BOARD, SAYS MAYOR

"Action of Civil Service Commission in Rejecting Appointees Is Blow at Popular Rights That the Citizens Will Resent"

"Mayor's Office Put in Position of Recommending, While Non-Residents, With No Vote Here, Control the Situation

AGGRIEVED at the rejection of four of his salaried appointees by the Civil Service Commission, Mayor Fitzgerald in a statement given out last night characterized the action as "a blow at popular rights and an invasion of the principles of home rule."

"The disappointment I feel," said the Mayor, "is not for myself, but for the four men whom I appointed, against whose personal reputation and character there has not been the slightest breath of suspicion and whose ability is unquestioned.

"As for myself, it has created a new issue, which the Republican party will be forced to consider."

Although the Civil Service Commission had until midnight under the law in which to finally approve the appointments of John T. Scully as superintendent of supplies, John B. Martin for penal commissioner, William E. Welch for water commissioner, and Thomas F. Campbell for wire commissioner, the Mayor abandoned any hope that favorable action would be taken at 6 p. m. and dictated the following statement to his stenographer:

The Mayor's Statement.

"The action of the Civil Service Board is in line with what I predicted a year ago, when this particular feature of the charter was being discussed at the State House.

"The Civil Service Commission loses its non-political character and is bound to become an active political issue.

"Not a word of any kind has been said against any one of the men rejected.

"The Mayors office is put in the position of recommending, while an alien body composed of non-residents who have no vote and therefore have no voice in Boston's affairs control the situation.

"Their action is a blow at popular rights and an invasion of the principles of home rule, that the people will resent at the proper time.

"I will have something further to say after pending appointments have been acted upon."

Realizing that the Civil Service Commission holds the whip hand, the Mayor will not send the names of any of those rejected to the State body for further consideration. Instead, he will wait until the commission has acted upon or failed to act upon the appointments which are now pending before it and his future course of action will be outlined by its policy on these names.

Fitzgerald is Puzzled.

Mr. Fitzgerald is utterly at a loss to explain how the Commission reached its conclusion. John E. Gilman was confirmed as Soldiers' Relief Commissioner, even though the Finance Commission had reported that his department was one of the most grossly mismanaged of any that the investigating body had probed. Looking at it from this standpoint, the Mayor reasons that the commission's criticism of the administrations of former Water Commissioner Welch and former Penal Commissioner Martin could not alone have been deemed sufficient reason for the rejection of Welch and Martin. For that reason he feels that the commission either played petty politics or refused confirmation for some other reason which those rejected should have the right to know.

"The reappointment of Fire Commissioner Samuel D. Parker will mean that all other appointments by Mayor Fitzgerald will be acted upon favorably by the Civil Service Commission," was the statement that Mayor Fitzgerald admits was made to him by a man close to the powers on Beacon Hill while the appointment of fire commissioner was pending. "Not by any consideration will I reappoint Parker."

It was the Mayor's reply. The following day the nomination of Surveyor [illegible] was sent to the Civil Service Board for Parker's place.

Members of the Civil Service Commission who would give no explanation last night as to why they had turned down four of the Mayor's appointments.

French Fan Given to Mrs. Roosevelt Stirs Up a Tempest

"If It Pleases You It's Yours," Said Gallant Statesman; Now Government Is Out.

PARIS, April 30.—Last Monday, while Former President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, as the guests of M. Pinchon, minister of foreign affairs, were being shown through the diplomatic Museum, Mrs. Roosevelt greatly admired a splendid ivory fan upon which were painted scenes in the American Revolution.

With true French gallantry, M. Pinchon exclaimed: "If it pleases you it is yours."

When M. Bertrand, founder and curator of the museum, heard of the affair, he flew over the barricades which protect ministerial dignity and confronted M. Pinchon, with the result that the minister, so the story goes, fell on his knees and pleaded that he had acted innocently and indiscreetly. Meanwhile the declaration is made that the idea of asking Mrs. Roosevelt to return the fan is outside the realm of the possibilities fixed by French chivalry.

ARCHBISHOP TO SPEAK.

Will Address Federation at Meeting in Lowell Today.

The Middlesex county branch of the American Federation of Catholic Societies will hold its eleventh mass meeting this afternoon in Associates' Hall, Lowell. Rev. William O'Brien, P. R., of St. Patrick's church, will preside. The leading address will be made by Archbishop O'Connell. The other speakers will be Timothy W. Haley, president of the branch; P. Sarsfield Cunniffe, Charles F. Daly, James H. Vahey, Rev. Ambrose F. Rocke and Rev. David J. Toomey, D. D.

32-YEAR-OLD HORSE WINS.

Judge Captures Race of Old Colony Driving Club National.

The weather conditions looked so dubious that few members of the Old Colony Driving Club, who had been matched to race yesterday afternoon, put in an appearance, but those who were on hand wanted a race, and the race committee made up a special programme.

The feature event was the victory of the bay gelding, Judge, said to be thirty-two years old.

Mr. Baker, Judge's owner and driver, is no Spring chicken himself, acknowledging to seventy-two birthdays.

ITALY FROWNS ON AUSTRIA.

Will Go to War if Turkish Territory Is Seized.

ROME, April 30.—Italy and Austria will quarrel should Austria take advantage of the Turkish disturbance by seizing Albania or any other Turkish territory. Italy has long been desirous of some of Turkey's Adriatic possessions and she is now determined that if any grabbing is to be done she will do her share. This is the belief in official circles.

HABEAS CORPUS FOR MORSE.

Application Before U. S. Supreme Court Monday Morning.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—A motion will probably be made in the Supreme Court Monday asking for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Charles W. Morse, now in the Atlanta penitentiary. Martin W. Littleton of New York, who is counsel for Mr. Morse, expects to go before the court, asking such a writ. The papers in the case have not yet been formally filed with the court.

MAIDS ORGANIZE TODAY.

Girls Complain of Poor Food, Bad Rooms and Long Hours.

Better food, better rooms and fewer hours of labor is the slogan of 200 Boston housemaids who will meet today and form a union at Wells Memorial Hall. Many object to sleeping in tiny attics and basements and eating leavings of tables. They also want more consideration in regard to hours. It is expected that in a few weeks the roster of membership will approach 1,000.

BOTH 75, WILL MARRY.

BRAINTREE, April 30.—Mrs. Emily J. Cole, seventy-five years old, of No. 68 Hancock street, and Former Representative Fred Hanson of Brockton, also seventy-five, will be married at the home of the bride on Monday. The marriage is the third for Mrs. Cole and the fourth for Hanson. They have known each other since childhood.

BARONESS HELD UP.

PARIS, April 30.—The Matin to-day prints a rather startling story about an attempted holdup of the Baroness Vaughan, the widow of King Leopold. It says that while the baroness was out driving on April 24, near Pontoise, with her two children, the road was suddenly barred by an automobile. A woman stood up in the machine and pointed a revolver at the baroness. It is stated that the woman was a newly relative.

YOUNG KNIGHT MIXES WAR-MEDICINE WITH BON-BONS

Orient Heights Suitor Quarrels With Fair Maid and Pop! Pop! Goes a Pistol.

POT-SHOT AT A BARBER

Pursued by a Crowd, Rolled in the Mud and Then Landed in Police Cell.

IN days of old, when knights were bold, few of them ever stirred up any live-lier time than did Frank Steebe, who called on his sweetheart, Miss Mamie Pimental, of Orient Heights, last night, quarreled with her, fired at two men who attempted to interfere with him, was chased by a mob, and then landed in the East Boston police station.

Miss Pimental lives on the third floor of No. 580 Bennington street. Steebe has been paying her rather strenuous attention for some time, but his fire-eating proclivities proved a handicap to his courtship, and last Thursday they had a spat.

"You can leave this house," Mamie told him, "and if you never come again I'll be thankful."

"Tut, tut," said the young man blithely. "I'll come again; see if I don't!"

And sure enough he did. But it was a penitent swashbuckler who was admitted to the Pimental apartment last evening. He was all smiles, and he came bearing gifts.

"I have brought you a box of candy, Mamie," said her cavalier. "We must make up."

"I don't know about that," said Mamie.

But she took the candy. They talked and by the time half of the box of candy had been consumed, they were in almost good enough humor for another quarrel. The inevitable clash came a little later when Steebe tried to kiss the girl.

Mamie took no new heed—and tripped down the stairs. On the ground floor of the house lives John J. Silva. She knocked at the door and complained that she was being too fervently treated by Steebe. By that time the young man also stood in the hallway.

Silva stepped out of his apartment, gave Steebe a push and landed him into the street. The caller was advised to vanish from the neighborhood.

The Swashbuckler Swashes.

"Take that," replied Steebe, pulling a revolver from his pocket and firing at Silva.

The shot aroused the neighborhood. The street soon filled. Silva was scrutinized carefully but no damage was detected.

Just around the corner is the barber shop of Johnson Silva, a cousin of the pistol-target. Out from the shop rushed people in various degrees of tonsorial finish. Steebe stood in the street, revolver in his hand. Among those in the crowd who caught sight of him was Albert Salvinelli.

"Give me that gun!" shouted Albert making a dash right at the mouth of the young cannon.

Bingo! A shot rang out. A puff of smoke rolled up. Albert turned around and around like a dancing dervish.

"I've been shot," he yelled.

Steebe made a dash through the street. He was not far from the Orient Heights railroad station and from there the crowd began to gather force. It augmented as Steebe ran through the street until it reached between 200 and 300.

Gee! How a Story Grows!

"He shot a man," cried one.

"Yes, two of them," said another.

Pretty soon the crowd got the idea that he had killed a half dozen or more, and then they grabbed the fugitive. They punched him, threw him to the street, kicked him and had just about unconscious when a policeman rescued him.

When Steebe reached the station house he was locked up against the pelting and the sergeant asked him his name. Steebe moaned and said to the desk. It was some time before the police could get sufficient information to book him. Then they learned that he was twenty-four years old and lived at No. 7 Champney street, South Boston. He said he was a machinist. He was allowed to go to sleep.

In the meantime Salvinelli had made a more complete inventory of his condition with the help of a few friends in a private room and they learned that the bullet of Steebe had cut through the barber's clothing and made a little red ridge across his breast.

"Pretty close shave," said the barber, which was considered a great joke in Orient Heights.

They entered the first man who had been shot at. He had also found a similar crimson streak made by the revolver on his temple.

"A close shave for me," he panted desperately.

"Can that," ordered a policeman. "That joke's been among here once to-night."

Mamie Pimental, in a fit of hysteria as a result of the excitement, declared that she was done for good with Steebe.

KISSING IS SAFE! HARVARD PUTS O. K. ON IT

Prof. Worthington Finds Union of Lips Not at All a Menace to Health.

HE PRAISES THE BACTERIA

Harmless in Normal Numbers, but Dangerous, as in Impure Milk.

KISSING is pronounced harmless, even if piquant, pastime. If you are healthy and well-intentioned, there is no reason why you should not indulge in it to your heart's content. You have the authority of Harvard University's expert for the practice—expert on bacteria, not on kisses, if you please!

Dr. A. M. Worthington, a professor in the Harvard Medical School, gave out the good news at a lecture in the medical school last night. He shattered the theory long held by professors at various universities that kissing is dangerous because it makes a swap of microbes, and that such barter is likely to produce illness in one or both parties to the bargain.

"Certainly," said Professor Worthington—and every person under sixty years old watched each syllable as it came from his lips—"there is every reason to believe that when two self-respecting, wholesome persons meet lip to lip, they may break away without upsetting the bacterial balance."

A Danger to Heart.

The claim as given out by the professor was somewhat academic. Translated into plain English, it means that two ordinary persons may kiss without danger to anything but their hearts. The balance of bacteria spoken of by Professor Worthington is, according to him, a condition which makes for health.

Professor Worthington's subject was "The Healthy Man and His Bacteria." It might just as well have been "Our Friends the Microbes." It was a defence of the little bugs which mankind has learned to fear, a defence as absolutely essential to all forms of animal and vegetable life. Preliminary to the dissertation on kissing he had this to say about the value of the bacteria in general:

"Could we eliminate bacteria from the earth it would absolutely become a desert scattered over with the dried remains of all former living things. Wherever their is life there are also bacteria. These bacteria are a very primitive order of plants, humble in their needs, stupendous in their life work."

Bacteria Danger in Milk.

After his defence of the little bugs, showing, of course, that when found in too great quantities the germ does danger, Professor Worthington pointed out the fallacies in many generally accepted theories regarding health. On only one thing he agreed with the usual professors—that bacteria in milk, when found in too large quantities, are a menace to health. "Dirty milk," he said, "is nothing more than sewage."

"Of our surroundings," continued the professor, "the atmosphere holds the fewest bacteria. In an ordinary room there are in every quart of air five or six bacteria. In drinking water, if it be spring water, there are few. In surface water there are many more.

In milk the number of species of bacteria varies with the amount of foreign matter or dirt it contains and the quantity of bacteria present depends on the age of the milk and its temperature. Even a refrigerator, however, does not retard the growth after forty-eight hours, and milk is often as old as that when we receive it.

"Unless he is breasted the new-born baby enters exactly into competition with a great variety of bacteria capable of doing harm. A breast fed baby enjoys freedom from many bacteria and also in the mother's milk he receives power to overcome certain bacteria and thus fortifies himself for thefuture."

Always to Be With Us.

Prof. Worthington was very skeptical regarding the possibility of ever ridding the human body of the harmful bacteria.

"There is no reason to believe," he said, "that any device of the human intellect can change or root out for or little a fundamental law, and the presence in our bodies of bacteria is in accordance with natural laws. When a man can by taking thought add one cubit to his stature we may begin to see what can be done in this direction.

"It is an amazing fact that no one of the great functions of life, such as the beating of the heart, breathing, digestion, the many complex workings of the nervous system, every vital function, are beyond the control of the intellect or the will. If these should come within the scope of our mental powers the race would perish in short order.

"When there is so much confusion of opinions and perversion in the few matters in our control we should be glad that so many problems already are solved for us by biological laws."

GIRL PLAYING TAG IS RUN DOWN BY AUTO

Rushed With Fractured Skull to Hospital in Machine Which Struck Her Down.

Thirteen-year-old Sarah Kearns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kearns, of No. 9 Confirmation Place, Charlestown, while playing "tag" in the street in front of her home last night was struck by an automobile owned and operated by Edward M. Fielding of No. 15 Algonquin street, Dorchester. The child's skull was fractured. She was taken to the Relief Hospital and her name was placed on the dangerous list.

There was no time for the child to leap backward or for the operator of the automobile to stop his machine. Nora Woods of No. 4 Confirmation place, and Mary Coughlin, of Bengdict street, each ten years old, were Sarah's playmates.

Two boys, George A. Shaw of No. 1041½ Main street, and Fred Sampson, a marathon runner, of No. 118 Bartlett street, also saw the little girl fall. With Mr. Fielding, they tore the injured child to the office of Dr. Richard F. Daly. He could do nothing and Mr. Fielding, accompanied by the child's father, rushed her to the Relief Hospital in the big car which had struck her.

F. E. Harlow of No. 15 Maxwell street, Dorchester, was in the car with Mr. Fielding when the child was run down. A large auto truck in front of their machine caused Mr. Fielding to turn to the left to pass it and at that moment the girl darted in front of his car. Mr. Fielding who was overcome with grief, said that his car was at second speed.

PUT BAN ON "TREATING."

Worcester Barkeeps Will Set 'Em Up No More.

When license opens in Worcester tomorrow nothing the gentlemanly barkeeps of the Heart of the Commonwealth will refrain from treating customers. This new recommendation by the Worcester License Commission sounds the death knell of the inviting phrase: "On the house, gentlemen, what'll you take?"

It has long been considered perfectly good form in the popular saloon for the barkeep to "treat" customers, especially large-buying ones. Any about the third round on the customers, Billy, the Barkeep, leans forward with an engaging smile and often in "set 'em up on the house." But it's different now.

Official of Institution Exposes Clerk's Clever Work With the Pen.

THE remarkable mathematical ability of George W. Coleman, in connection with his wonderful facility with a pen in making, altering and doctoring figures, made it possible for him to steal the $300,000 from the National City Bank of Cambridge right under the noses of the bank examiners who called at the institution, and the directors who gave it apparently but superficial attention.

While the examiner was counting the cash Coleman with unsuspected audacity would alter the figures on the bank sheets, deducting what he had stolen as per figures that he carried in his pocket, so that the amount of cash found would exactly fit the manufactured figures.

The deft manner in which Coleman could raise or reduce a figure with a single stroke of the pen, according to the story of a bank official, who is in close touch with the way the bank was robbed, puts the young bank wrecker in the "Jim, the Penman" class.

Story of Bank Official.

Just how Coleman tricked the examiner and how it took real banking men only a few minutes to find out the truth when they looked at the books is here related for the first time by the bank official who talked to a reporter of the Sunday American:

"The first thing that the national bank examiner did when he appeared was to take possession of all of the bank's cash. This he would count as quickly as possible so that the bank might have its use when he had finished his work.

"Right here is where Coleman played his little joker. He doctored the pages of the bank sheets while the examiner counted the cash. With a private memorandum in his pocket of the actual standing of the depositors, as against the fictitious standing on the books, Coleman erased, added and substituted figures so that on each particular visit the bank examiner found the cash and accounts absolutely in accord. In other words, Coleman made the bank sheets tally with the examiner counted the cash.

"Here's where Coleman showed himself to be an artist with original methods. He made figures with a light touch of the pen. He also made a figure 3 or a figure 5 so nearly straight that it could be easily converted into a figure 4. It was an artistic performance. The line was hairline and the curves were barely perceptible. If one should ask what a certain figure was George could say it was a 5, and you could see that it was so. If he wanted to juggle and made a deposit seem $1,000 less, he might run a pen down through the figure in a straight line just a trifle more

GREAT MILK WAR IS ON; SUPPLY IS HELD UP

Thousands of Empty Cans Are Returned by Producers, Who Demand Winter Prices; Gov. Draper Makes Effort for Peace

Producers, Said to Be Storing Milk at Numerous Points, Confident of Supplying Public; Health Board Watches Product

THE great milk strike is on. Car after car rolled into the big distributing stations of the wholesale dealers in Charlestown this morning with empty cans. The farmers sent their milk in as usual, but when they were asked to take their usual quota of empty cans for to-day's supply yesterday they sullenly refused.

Governor Draper spent several hours yesterday in a desperate effort to prevent the strike. The farmers told him he was too late. They said they are ready to submit their grievances to arbitration, but that the order has gone out to stop sending milk to Boston, and it was impossible to recall it.

President Stanley Abbott and Secretary A. A. Hunter of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Company, who are directing the boycott of the Boston middlemen, or contractors, said that the Boston market, which usually gets between 55,000 and 60,000 eight and one-half-quart cans daily, got only from 36,000 to 40,000 to-day. Both said this amount would be reduced to less than 10,000 cans from the old sources by to-night and to-morrow morning.

Say Milk Has Been Stored.

They agreed that large quantities of what they call stored milk had been shipped in and admitted that it would be so skilfully distributed as to make the consumers think the farmers had failed in living up the supply.

"But wait a day or two," said President Abbott. "Milk is something which can't be stored or substituted if its purity and standard are maintained. We shall insist on the Boston Board of Health doing its duty. If they try to send milk that is below the standard, or milk treated with the different kinds of preservatives, we shall stop that mighty quick."

Dr. S. H. Durgin, president of the Board of Health, said he had been notified by the farmers to be on the watch for milk below the legal standard, and milk which has been stored so long that it is unfit for use. He said his inspectors will insist on every legal requirement.

The Governor is Hopeful.

Governor Draper made a statement to the newspaper reporters after he had spent several hours in conference with President Abbott and Secretary Hunter, representing the farmers, and several of the big contractors. He said he had made little progress, but hopes for better luck to-morrow morning, when he will again try to bring both sides into agreement.

The Governor found the farmers willing to agree to what is essentially unconditional arbitration, but the big contractors declined to commit themselves at this time. They said a board of arbitration might make them pay more for their milk and would be unable in turn to make the consumers pay more if the contractors found it necessary to raise the price on that end. They want no such arrangement.

The Governor's statement follows:

I have conferred to-day with representatives of the farmers, and they stated to me that they were willing to submit the questions at issue between them and the contractors to arbitration. After having been assured of their position, I did I to get in touch with all the large contractors, but it has been impossible to meet them all, and from what I find [illegible] dulgences and hysteria of strikes and I undercurrent of steadfastness in the [illegible] pit that is found in the treatment of General Grant from the time he came on [illegible] national stage as a defender of the Union to the day of his death on Mt. McGregor. His writes could not be outdone as an [illegible] to righteous devotion and as a model of

ENLARGE HOME FOR RESCUED CHILDREN

Report of S. P. C. C. Says Moral Danger to Young Boston Girls Is Growing.

So great has become the demand in Boston to protect young girls from moral danger, declared President Grafton D. Cushing of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in the annual report issued yesterday, that it has become necessary to remodel the temporary home so as to make a provision for them.

Through the work of the society eighty-six cases where young girls had been mistreated were brought to the attention of the courts within the past year, all of whom were between fourteen and seventeen years old, and most of them under fifteen.

Attention has also been given to boys between nine and fourteen years old who have been compelled to work in a way that meant great injury to them. About 125 boys of this age were found working on milk teams and many of them were required to rise at 2:30 in the morning to begin their employment of the day.

C. J. Carstens, the general agent of the society, in discussing the cases of the young girls, said that effective work had been brought to court for mistreating the girls and that out of this number only five were discharged from custody.

WALKER BILL IN SENATE.

Speaker Walker's direct nomination bill for Senators and Representatives will be debated to-morrow in the State Senate. The bill has passed the House by a roll call vote of 187 to 2. Opposition to the Walker bill in the Senate will come from Evans of Everett, who doesn't believe in direct nominations, and from Nason of Haverhill, who wants the bill to include county officers and State committemen, as well as members of the Legislature.

MAYOR HOWARD IS IN TROUBLE AGAIN

Salem Executive Faces a New Week of Woe in a Court Room.

SALEM, April 30.—Mayor Howard is in a peck of trouble again. He is cited to appear next Monday in poor debtor's court on a judgment ordained by Lewis Sherry, the New York restaurant keeper, which amounts to $252. On Tuesday he is scheduled to appear in the Essex County Superior Court in Newburyport to defend suits for libel brought against him by former Alderman Doyle, Editor Damon and others. Yesterday the Mayor filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court here. It gave his liabilities at $30,415.

The Mayor had a close call from going to jail two months ago when Daniel Hegarty, a liquor dealer of Peabody, began suit in the libel case, feared the executive might leave the city and withdrew himself as security. Had not $800 Salem women given $1 each the Mayor might have been placed behind the bars.

Last Friday Mayor Howard was defaulted in the poor debtors' court on proceedings brought by William C. Hood of New York to recover $173 on judgment. The Mayor was thus made liable to arrest, but he went to the United States District Court and filed his bankruptcy petition.

Howard's petition shows that all of his creditors live out of the State. His debts were nearly all piled up in 1907 and 1908. The schedule shows the Mayor liked the good things of life. He owes Sherry, who owns the Carleton Hotel, London, $445 for food and lodging in 1908; the Hotel Land House, New York, $179 for meals in 1907, and the New York Transportation Company $1,000 for carriage hire in 1907. He owes Hegarty $2,500 gotten on a key ring, copyrights on "Grandmother's Cook Book," "Tick" and "Wall Street," wearing apparel valued at $100, on which he claims exemption, and shares in the Salem Newspaper Company, par value $60,300, but market value unascertained, and on-half interest in the estate of his dead father.

HOW COLEMAN WAS ABLE TO LOOT BANK

heartily than he had made the original figure five and 10, it was a figure one, and he was able to pocket $4,000 by the transaction if the sum chanced to be in four figures or more. The same with the threes and even with the tens.

"You will remember that he stole in even thousands. His own frank figures show it easy to see one numeral, all that was necessary in each deposit tamperes with.

"The bank examiner said immediately afterward that George Coleman changed figures while the examiner worked. It was the fact. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in accounts were juggled by Coleman during the time the examiner was engaged in counting up bank cash.

"It was represented to the officials of the Harvard Trust Company that the Cambridge bank, which a few years ago carried deposits of between $400,000 and $500,000, had suffered a great falling off in business until at this time the total deposits were down to about $120,000.

"The Cambridge National would like to have the Harvard Trust Company buy out its business.

"Here one of the Incomprehensible things presented itself. How, in a few years, could the business be allowed to drop down from nearly $500,000 to a little over $100,000 and no one in authority seek out the causes and desists? The natural desire to remedy such a situation would seem sufficient to cause the officers of the bank to go through its affairs with a fine tooth comb. Evidently this was not done. Instead suggestions were made to sell its business to the Harvard Trust Company.

"One Saturday afternoon, just before the exposure, President W. A. Bullard of the Harvard Trust Company, accompanied by his treasurer, W. F. Earle, whose name by the way is so similar to that of an officer of the looted bank as to cause much confusion among those who do not know them, went to the Cambridge National Bank after closing time to look over the prospective purchase. These two men unearthed the fraud since fully untangled under the hands of a receiver.

Traces of Fraud First Found.

"They looked over the books and readily made discoveries, although it was the last thing to their minds that they were about to uncover the greatest bank swindle of New England. Their only purpose was to satisfy themselves that the Harvard Trust Company would be benefited by taking over the business of the Cambridge National bank.

"They could not find that the deposits were about $120,000. This made them wonder. They knew that some of the bank officials were millionaires and that many of the directors were heavy depositors in their own bank. They had heard that the bank directors, themselves, were depositors to the amount of, say, $100,000, in the aggregate. This would leave only $20,000 on deposit by all the other customers. This did look unreasonable.

"It was explained to President Bullard and Treasurer Earle of the Harvard Trust Co. that the list of depositors in the Cambridge bank ran up to 5,000 or more and that would make the conservative look man sceptical, this idea of 500 depositors for only $20,000 on deposit, or an average of about $40 each. What was their increased surprise to learn that even this was reduced by $5,000 and that the national bank had only $15,000 on deposit ledger, which meant a bare $15,000 over and above the bank's own city officers.

Average of Deposits Cut Down.

"The question arose with them, would it would be worth while to buy out such a business as this? How much of this $15,000 could they hold? What could the trust company expect of the $15,000 deposits of the cutlook officers and what value would be the additional $15,000 or so deposits belonging to 500 individual depositors? It would allow the 500 depositors a average of only $30 each and the result known among bank men that each depositor must carry a balance of $50 or more before the bank can be secure from the expense of passbooks and literature.

"President Bullard and Treasurer Earle approached with some misgivings the proposition to take over the deposit business of the Cambridge National, even when the opportunity for profits was apparent. The smiles fell from their eyes in less than a minute after they began their work.

"Treasurer Earle got down to business and ask to see the depositors' ledger, a very natural request. Opening it he ran through the pages and saw that about fifteen pages were properly filled with the names of depositors and against these names were the varying deposits. Then pages with about nearly forty names on each, totaled up to 500 as represented.

Treasurer Earle counted the number of deposits of $50 or less. President Bullard set down the total. Then they repeated the process with the deposits ranging from $50 to $100, between $100 and $200, between $200 and $500, and finally all those over $500. In a few minutes they had averaged up the deposits, and found that instead of the sum total being $115,000, as per the bank's figures, the deposits seemingly amounted to over $240,000.

"The big balance, debit and credit columns in this case were all right. Even the bank examiner had passed them on. But a comparison with date sheet back would soon bring things to light. That is one of the faults of the bank examination system. Auditing is needed in the books. A bank examiner should have assistance, so that he could refer back and follow through page after page, and get at the heart of things."

"BIG BILL" KELIHER IS ARRAIGNED; BAIL AGAIN MADE $25,000

"Big Bill" Keliher, accused of aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in the robbery of the City National Bank of Cambridge, will vehemently deny that he had anything to do with getting the money from the bank or anything to do with Coleman's introduction to the fake sharpers who got the bulk of his money, when he is placed on trial.

Having engaged Daniel H. Coakley and Harvey H. Pratt, two of the most prominent lawyers in Boston, to defend him Keliher proposes to make a determined fight to escape prison. He will attempt to show that Coleman represented to him and to other that he got his money from another source than the bank, and that Coleman led him into the fake faro parlor of the New York swindlers.

These facts became known yesterday after "Big Bill" had been arraigned before Commissioner Hayes of the Federal Court, and his case continued until 3 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon. His bond of $25,000 was renewed. Keliher and Coleman will be arraigned before Judge Lowell of the Circuit Court on Wednesday to plead to the two indictments found against them.

Just when the trials of any of the bank cases will be held is uncertain. Asa P. French, United States district attorney, has requested to put Coleman on trial on May 10, but he told Judge Lowell yesterday that he was surprised at the time the jurors had been notified to appear on May 17 on another case.

Mr. French was very disappointed at this, and told the court that he wanted the Cambridge bank cases disposed of the very before the Summer vacation set in. Judge Lowell replied he would confer with Judge Colt of the United States Circuit Court and Mr. French said that he would take the matter up with him later.

STRIKERS PARADE TODAY.

Providence Police Prepared for Trouble at Demonstration.

Providence, April 30.—Because the contractors of this city would not agree to a uniform wage scale, 1,600 laborers, most of them Italians, went on strike to-day. Unless some settlement is made before Monday the entire mason work which is going on in a number of buildings will be held up. To put their grievances before the people a big parade will be held to-day under the auspices of the Socialist Society. Leaders of the strikers declare that they will carry the red flag of the society regardless of opposition. William H. Luther, chairman of the board of police commissioners, under no considerations would he allow the red flag to be displayed. Anticipating trouble 200 reserve patrolmen will patrol the line of march.

Lynn Shoe Plant for Haverhill.

LYNN, April 30.—Cushman & Hebert, shoe manufacturers for the past ten years on Union street and employing 500 hands during the rush times, to-day served notice on their landlord, Walter M. Libby, that they would remove their plant to Haverhill on June 1. The firm states that the cause is due to the frequency of labor disputes in this city.

SPRINGFIELD CAR MEN TO QUIT WORK

SPRINGFIELD, April 30.—Springfield is facing the prospect of an open strike that may tie up the street railway of the city. Tired of the lengthy negotiations which they have been holding with the railway owners, the motormen and conductors are preparing to quit work to compel the company to advance wages.

All that remains to be done is for the union officials to secure consent a strike from four more members of the international executive committee. Theomsen of three members of this committee has been received by local President P. J. O'Brien.

To-night President O'Brien and 6 other officials are burning the telegraph wires trying to get into touch with the other four executive committeemen, whom are hard to reach. Trolley employees here expect a strike to be declared in a short time. President O'Brien will give the word to the men to leave their jobs as soon as the four committee members on board from.

Wellesley Girls Are Held by Quarantine

Faculty Fears Spread of Epidemic to Students and Boston Trips Forbidden.

No chances are being taken for scarlet fever to get into Wellesley College. The faculty issued instructions to the students yesterday forbidding them to go to Boston, to ride in street cars, to go to the theatres, churches or any public place of assembly until the epidemic is over. Wellesley has, in fact, declared a quarantine against Greater Boston. The faculty issued this statement:

"We have requested our students to remain in the college grounds for a few days and not to go to theatres of places of public entertainment in and about Boston. This is done because of the prevalence of scarlet fever and as a precautionary measure to guard against the contagion."

EPIDEMIC OF SCARLET FEVER CONTROLLED

The scarlet fever epidemic is under control.

The Boston Board of Health stated last evening that the crest of the epidemic had passed and that it looked for a continually decreasing number of new cases in the coming week. There were forty-one new cases reported to the board in Boston proper yesterday as against seventy for the twenty-four hours previous.

In most of the new cases the disease was traced to the milk dealer. The total number of cases of fever for the month in Boston will be a little over 500. Had it been a normal month the figures would have been about 175. April is always the heaviest month of the year for this disease. In towns and cities in the fever zone 231 cases have been registered since the epidemic appeared. There are at present 83 cases of scarlet fever within the Metropolitan district. There were no new cases of the disease reported to the board yesterday from Simmons College.

10 PER CENT. COTTON LOSS.

Fourteen Million Acres Must Be Replanted in the South.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 30.—In a statement issued by the National Ginners' Association, it is estimated that the acreage planted to cotton in the Southern states on April 26 had been increased by 7-10ths of 1 per cent, as compared with the same date last year.

Reports to the association show that 64 per cent. of the crop has been planted. Most of the plants which were up before the recent cold wave were killed. Except in Central and Southern Texas, and it is estimated that 14,000,000 acres should be replanted. With average weather a loss 10 per cent. in yield is predicted.

HUNT IPSWICH BURGLARS.

Doctor Held by Armed Men Who Ransacked House.

IPSWICH, April 30.—Police officers all over Essex County and especially those in Ipswich have searched in vain for two burglars who broke into the home of Dr. M. C. McGinley, at Salem and Manning streets, early to-day. Dr. McGinley heard a noise in his house. He went down stairs and saw two men. One held a revolver at his head, while the other ransacked the house. When they left the doctor phoned the police. Before this the pair had gone to the house of Dr. G. G. Bailey, where they begged for car fare to Boston, but were refused.

FALL RIVER BUILDING TIED UP BY STRIKE

Carpenters Vote to Go Out To-morrow; also Electrical Workers and Lathers.

FALL RIVER, April 30.—Building operations in this city will be tied up Monday as a result of a strike called at a mass meeting of the carpenters' unions of Fall River to-night. The lathers and electrical workers will go out Monday, making 500 who will abandon work in a fight for increase in wages and shorter hours.

Work will be stopped on the new Massasoit and Meracomet bank structures, on the new contagious hospital, on the Ward 3 schoolhouse and the court house building, in addition to the numerous dwelling houses going up in various parts of the city.

Last March the unions demanded 45 cents per hour for a week of 44 hours. The master builders offered 44 cents for 48 hours a week, or 42 cents for 44 hours. Both were turned down. The carpenters declared they were willing to compromise on 43 cents per hour, but this the builders refused to consider.

The lathers demanded $2.50 per day and said they are losing members. They have been receiving from $2 to $2.25 per day. The electrical workers demanded $3 per day for a week of 48 hours. Their pay now ranges from $2.25 to $2.50 per day of nine hours.

RAILWAY MEN PROTEST.

Business Association Say Federal Bill Is Unduly Amended.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The Railway Business Association, selling agent for manufacturers of railway equipment and supplies, is making a vigorous protest against the enactment of piling radical and drastic new amendments on the administration's railway bill.

A pamphlet, entitled "What's the Hurry?" is being circulated among Senators and Representatives. It protests against the pleading of the bill after public hearings have been concluded in committee by the addition of amendments which have, it is declared, not received any adequate consideration.

Many of these amendments, the pamphlet urges, are not fathered by any responsible authority and have no support from any considerable body of men. Some, it is said, are the product of but one brain. It is asked in view of the reports of the investigation made by influential bodies, for legislation based on such data, whether the public demand for a large proportion in the present Congress has not been exaggerated.

The pamphlet, which voices the interests of the railway supply manufacturers, declares that restrictions against the operations of railroads are actually reported favorably without public hearings or any competent consideration. It is urged that no such amendments should pass until their necessity is publicly shown.

BAR BILL UP TOMORROW.

Liquor Interests' Only Hope Now Is Repeal.

Uncertainty as to the fate of the hat and bottle bill in the State Senate is due to end to-morrow, when the Senate will consider the measure on the question of enactment. Its final passage by the liquor interests say they will allow the bill to pass without further protest. They say that the postponement of final action until after the Recess for this year has been assured satisfied them for this session of the Legislature. If the measure is passed and is signed by the Governor they will attempt to have it repealed before May 1, 1911, when it is due to be effective.

NOW WE CAN FIGURE THE END OF US ALL!

Want to Know How? Well, Use Solution of Neodymium; It's Just as Easy!

Science says that the earth will meet its doom some time in the future when it collides with a star. Professors E. C. Pickering of Harvard, and Professor Robert Wood of Johns Hopkins, have discovered how to measure the velocity of a star approaching the earth, which means that we shall have several years warning if the catastrophe ever takes place.

The agency through which this feat is accomplished is a little known by-product derived from the manufacture of gas mantles. It is known as neodymium.

With the aid of this substance Professor Pickering can tell how far a stellar body is from the earth and how rapidly it is approaching if it is traveling toward us in a direct line. Hitherto it was possible to tell the velocity of a star moving at an angle to the earth, but not otherwise.

It is as if one tried to estimate the speed of an express train by standing on the track and watching it approach.

In the making of gas mantels the residue remains which is known as chloride of neodymium.

By application of this substance is utilized in a glass box, which is affixed to the telescope, so that the rays of light from the stars are obliged to pass through it. They are filtered by it just as light is filtered by looking through colored glass. It is a well known fact that only the red waves of light from a lamp will pass through red glass, the yellow waves through yellow glass and so on.

By separating the long and short rays from the star, the neodymium illustrates the astronomers with basis for calculation which enable them to figure the velocity of an approaching star.

STORM SIGNALS FLYING.

Colder Today, but Summer Will Return Tomorrow.

Sunshine and warmth are coming back to Boston to-morrow. The long string of unpleasant days will not be broken to-day, according to the Weather Bureau. The forecast is:

To-day, partly cloudy and cooler. Monday generally fair. Northerly winds becoming variable.

It is going to be colder to-day, much colder than last night, when the temperature went up as high as sixty at eight o'clock in the evening. In Washington and Baltimore the temperature has risen west above the ninety mark.

A storm is brewing along the South New England coast. At Nantucket the wind last night was blowing forty-two miles an hour and at Portland, Me., thirty-eight miles. Southwest winds will prevail on all along the coast and will probably stay out to-day.

PACKERS ARE INDICTED.

Charged with Forming Combination and Conspiracy.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 30.—The Grand Jury this afternoon returned two indictments each against the Bobby Packing Company, Swift & Co., Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co., Morris & Co., and Armour & Co. The first count charges conspiracy against the South Atlantic Company, a rival concern, while the second charges a combination to eliminate competition.

Two base hits—Burke, Mason 2. Struck out—By Mason 9, by Lyter 5. Umpire—Drosewater.

THE box score tells of the amazing work of "Blossom" Mason, the girl pitcher of the Short Beach Stars, a boys' team, in a game yesterday with the Highlands of Winthrop. Summed up, this is what the athletic "Blossom" did:

Allowed her opponents only five singles; made three runs herself; got her base on balls once; whaled out a two-bagger; stole two bases; had two put outs; covered first base; had two assist; no errors; gave nine bases on balls; struck out nine men against her opponents' four, and went the whole route of nine full innings.

Can you beat it? Or even tie it?

"Blossom" Mason is fourteen years old. Her proper name is Cecile Mason. She has all the kids of Winthrop and Revere faded when it comes to shooting over fliers and curves.

Small But Athletic Girl.

Blossom is small for her age but hard as nails. She has light hair, tied with a bow of ribbon, and grimy hands, small but hard and calloused from manipulating the sphere. She lives at No. 460 Revere street and came from Worcester about a year ago.

Blossom is a tomboy. She hung around the vacant lot where the Boys were in process of twinkling and she saw that their candidate for pitcher was a lemon.

"Hey, you fellows, that kid ain't no good. Let me throw you a few," was Blossom's way of introducing herself. The boys gave her the laugh, but "Spike" Lyter was attracted by her blonde hair and insisted that she be given a chance.

Blossom knotted a string around the neck of three or four batsmen, and sudden the hosts of the gang they all struck out. That's how Miss Mason became pitcher of the team. She then put ambition and declared she ought to be captain, but nothing doing, "Spike" Lyter was elected by a vote of eight to one.

An Interview with Blossom.

Blossom was interviewed by a Sunday American reporter just after a practice game. She was on the coaching line.

"Come on, your chumps, didn't any girls ten. Swing at it, you Tim Ryan. The ball won't hurt you. Knock a grass cutter across."

"Oh, you go on," said Miss Mason, coquettishly.

Her First Taste of Defeat.

Blossom had her first taste of defeat when she met the Berkeleys a few days ago. Those heroes lolled off eight runs, and when the Short Beach boys had scored seven the Berkeleys sawed the game off. Blossom was much disappointed.

"I had three curves swinging wildly for it," she said. "And if I had my kind of fielding support they wouldn't have got more than one or two runs."

However, the shooting of the Short Beach team against the strong Berkeleys has encouraged them so that they have engaged a manager in the person of Pershall Peebles, seventeen years old. The only trouble is that the girl pitcher is such a drawing card that the players think they ought to charge admission to see their games. This is a matter which can be settled later.

May Party at Malden.

The St. Mary's Ladies Society of Malden will hold a May party next Friday evening in Esther Hall, Malden.

HICCOUGHS 11 DAYS, HELPED BY BARBER

Relieves Patient by East Indian Cure While Doctors Try Modern Methods.

WORCESTER, April 30.—Although several of the best physicians in Worcester have been treating Frank A. Leland, the wealthy piano merchant, in an effort to stop hiccoughs which have continued for eleven days, the best results have been obtained by Daniel B. Dean, a barber, who used East Indian methods. Mr. Dean succeeded in stopping the hiccoughs for some time, and says that if he were allowed to continue the treatment he would bring about a complete cure.

"I have treated Mr. Leland twice, and each time I have stopped his hiccoughs," said Barber Dean to-day. "If I were permitted to treat him unhampered by the physicians I could cure him very quickly.

"My remedy is an East Indian one, which I learned while living there. I came from the East Indies and they think nothing there of curing the trouble. Physicians have asked me what I do, but I have refused them. I do not want money for my efforts.

Mr. Leland's daughter, in discussing her father's illness, said: "Father is resting comfortably to-day. She stories that Mr. Dean, the barber, is treating father, are ridiculous. He was called to shave father and while shaving him he volunteered the advice which would help put father. He rubbed in back of father's ears and gave a drink of water. He did stop father for a time, but I think it was because he took his mind off the hiccoughs by talking to him.

Mr. Leland's condition is not considered serious now.

DRESSMAKERS BUT "COGS."

Bostonians Not Leaders in Big Smuggling Plot.

The leaders in the $5,000,000 smuggling ring are not Mrs. Moore and Mabel Holland, the Boston dressmakers, according to dispatches from New York. Information to-day shows that the United States district attorney's office in New York is prepared to go after higher game.

A great machine is said to have been discovered in which officials say the two Boston women and Philip A. Phillipsen are only cogs. The government officials have reported to have discovered that jewelry smuggling has been going on in much the same manner in which gowns and lingerie are brought in.

100 AT MAY FESTIVAL.

Quincy Children Help Raise Summer School Fund.

QUINCY, April 30.—One hundred children took part to-day in the annual May festival given by the educational committee of the Quincy Women's Club in Music Hall for the benefit of the Summer schools. Elizabeth Johnson, president of the club, had charge of the arrangements. D. King was master of ceremonies, and brought up all the small gods for the children. Among those who took part were Miss Ruth Bass, Miss Edith Corley, the Misses Jewis and Grace McDonald, Edmund Wade, Miss Hattie Peirce and Miss Helen Day.

LABOE'S $25,000 GROCERY.

Co-operative Store to Be Established in Brockton.

BROCKTON, April 30.—Twenty-five thousand dollars will be raised by the local unions affiliated with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union of America to establish a co-operative grocery store in this city, at which the union workers may obtain their supplies at cost. President Tobin says that if the grocery plan works well 6 co-operative warehouse may be established.

New Members for M. C. O. F.

Fifty-four candidates will be initiated into the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters during the coming week. They will join the following courts: Court Ionia, court Essex, seven; court St. Paul, four; Court Worcester, six; Court Columbia, five; Court Father Conway, five; Court Leponto, five, and Court Gavin, six.

FRESH AIR NEEDED IN BOSTON SCHOOLS

Chicago Principal Says Children Here Are Dulled by Unfavorable Conditions.

A. E. Watt of Chicago told the Twentieth Century Club yesterday that Boston school children lack fresh air, which results in their having headaches, their mentality being dulled and their senses of taste and smell being impaired.

Mr. Watt is principal of the Graham School in Chicago. Among the things he told the parents of the Twentieth Century Club were the following:

"The Boston school rooms are drier than any lumber kiln in Chicago. They are breeding spots for swollen glands, diphtheria, catarrh, consumption and diseases which lower the vitality of the children. I would recommend that the Boston school authorities start fresh-air classes for the children by throwing open the school windows during school hours.

"To the school teacher in Boston is entrusted the care of forty children. She is told to push them through in one year. In that time she is chiefly affected with bad headaches and her pupils, some of them, are in the same condition. Their sense of smell and taste are gone and their general health is impaired, on account of the kind of air they are compelled to breathe in their bodies. The foul atmosphere dulls their mentality.

"If there were proper humidity in the school room you would find that children would have a wide capacity for learning instead of acting in a comatose state."

STEALING BECOMES MANIA.

G. L. COLBURN, Aged 52, Spends 35 Years in Prison.

George L. Colburn, a former Brookline boy, now under arrest in Washington on a charge of burglary, has spent thirty-five of his fifty-two years behind prison bars, according to Chief of Police Alonzo W. Corey of Brookline.

When Colburn, who is also known as Andrew Lee, is brought to trial in Washington, inspector James H. Sitts of the Brookline Police Department, will go there and tell of Colburn's mania for theft.

"He told us once," said Chief Corey, "that he could break off from any other habit than stealing. He said that when he saw a watch or something else that attracted him he just had to get it. Colburn means to do right, but he has proved by his life that burglary is a mania with him."

TWO INJURED IN $50 FIRE.

Flames Fought with Art Squares and Clothing.

The overturning of a lamp in the pantry of Mrs. Margaret McDonald's apartments caused a $50 loss at No. 15 Greenwich street, Dorchester, last night. Mrs. McDonald and her family were away and John McDonald, a lodger of the household, is supposed to have left the lamp in the pantry. McDonald was carried into the street unconscious.

John Barnes, an up-stairs tenant, discovered the fire. He fought it with table cloths, art squares and clothing. He was burned about the hands and face and his feet were cut by glass.

SYMPATHY FOR JEWS VOICED IN CONGRESS

Resolution Asks President to Use Office to Stop Russian Persecution.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The State Department cabled the United States consul at Odessa to-day, inquiring as to the truth of the published report that there has been a massacre and ejection of Jews, either there or at Kieff, since April 28.

"The citizens of the United States have heard with profound horror reports from time to time of massacres of the Jews in Russia," says a resolution introduced to-day by Representative Francis Burton Harrison of New York, which requests the President to use such good and friendly offices with the Russian Government as the traditional friendship between the two nations may justify, to bring about action by the Russian Government to prevent the recurrence of such outrages in the future."

This resolution says it is the sentiment of the House "That persecutions of the Jews in Russia and elsewhere, upon their natural right to life, liberty and property are shocking to the enlightened conscience of mankind, and to be severely condemned by the American people."

Subsequent cablegrams from Russia denied the published reports of wholesale expulsions.

WOMAN IN SMITH CASE IS LOCATED

NEW YORK, April 30.—Detectives attached to the West Twentieth street station have unmasked the identity of the woman who lived with Wellington Smith, the millionaire Lee, Mass., paper manufacturer, when he was killed last Tuesday night by the collapse of a folding bed in a boarding house on West Twenty-third street. She is Anna Castleman, a handsome, well preserved woman of middle age, and is well known in Lee and Pittsfield and also in Springfield and Worcester.

According to the detectives who have worked on the case Anna Castleman and her sister Fannie lived either in Pittsfield or Lee up to seven years ago. It is reported that Anna worked at one time in one of Wellington Smith's paper mills. From Pittsfield the two sisters moved to Springfield, where they lived in fine style for four years.

The latter manufacturer visited them frequently, but, because of comment, which spread in Pittsfield and Lee, the women moved to New York three years ago. They rented and furnished a fine establishment in West Seventy-second street, between Columbus and Amsterdam avenues, and Mr. Smith made occasional visits there on his periodical visits to New York. The manager of the Smith family in Lee and all his friends knew that Anna Castleman was the mysterious woman in the case the moment they heard of his death.

Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Mrs. Jackson Hadley, Esopus, N. Y., writes:

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write this. For years I have suffered terribly with kidney and bladder trouble. The pain in my back by spells was so great I could scarcely stand on my feet, and such terrible headache and pain around my heart, and was so nervous all the time that life seemed a burden to me.

"I paid out a great many dollars, both for doctors and patent medicines, and no benefit only for the time.

"One day, looking through a Peruna almanac, I saw how great cures had been benefited by using Peruna. I followed directions and after taking four bottles of Peruna can stand on my feet and work all day with comfort. The pain in my back and head has entirely left me, and I am not so nervous, and can say I am completely cured from all Kidney trouble."

Internal Catarrh.

Mrs. M. E. Seymour, R. F. D. 2, Bowman, Georgia, writes:

"I am ready to speak a few words in favor of Peruna and Manalin.

"I have tried them for nearly every ill of life for myself and family, and find them to be all the doctor claims them to be. You ought to see how my internal catarrh when my doctor could not."

Headache and Weak Back.

Mrs. Emma Green, 913 Jason St., Room 7, Denver, Col., writes:

"Peruna has been a great blessing to me. I suffered agonies with severe headaches and a weak back so that I hardly drag myself around.

"A friend who was visiting me was taking Peruna for the same trouble and induced me to try it. I soon found that I was being helped and in less than three weeks I felt like a different woman and in four months I was well. Peruna certainly gave me strength.

"I consider it an ideal woman's remedy."

Systemic Catarrh.

Mrs. Augusta Pauline Ochs, R. F. D. 2, North English, Iowa, writes:

"I took Peruna over three years. I suffered from systemic catarrh and had pains in my right side so I could hardly do my housework.

"I am 66 years old, and am now doing all my housework. I am in the best of health and cannot thank Dr. Hartman enough for his good advice and medicine."

PARK STREET TO STATION.

Committee's Favorable Report on Subway Measure Filed.

The favorable report of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs on the bill for a subway from Park street to South station was filed with the clerk of the House yesterday and will be read in the House to-morrow.

The Committee has reported a resolve directing the Boston Transit Commission to investigate proposed routes, and to report a bill for building the subway in the next Legislature. With favorable action, construction should begin in about a year.

The committee has also reported a resolve directing the Transit Commission to investigate routes for tunnels to South Boston and Dorchester.

Foresee Peril From Air Flying.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—One of the menacing dangers confronting this country when flying machines shall become as numerous as buggies was pointed out by Representative Hay of Virginia, in the House to-day. He cited an instance in Lemlico county, Virginia, farmer $200 for a horse killed by a scrap of wire dropped from a weather kite.

GREAT MILK BOYCOTT IS NOW ON IN EARNEST: FARMERS CUTTING OFF THE SUPPLY FOR BOSTON

Governor Draper Seeking to Settle Dispute by Getting Both Sides Before an Arbitration Board; Contractors Assure Consumers Supply Is Not Endangered, While Producers Give Warning

learned I believe that they are not all willing to submit the questions at issue to arbitration at this time.

Problem of Arbitration.

"There feel that should the chances as the arbitrators might be, it would be impossible for any arbitration committee to fix the price which the consumers would be obliged to pay, therefore arbitration would be to extremely difficult matter and might be abortive if the contractors were forced to pay higher prices for the articles which they purchase, and the arbitrators could not compel a price for the article at which they should sell it.

"I have not given up the hope of to arranging this matter that it may be submitted to a competent board for arbitration and have arranged for further conference with milk contractors on Monday morning.

"It is a difficult matter to handle, with many serious questions to be considered, but I have hopes that some way may be found to bring this matter to a successful board for settlement, soon."

Governor Draper was asked if the farmers have agreed to arbitrate without making Winter prices pending a settlement a condition of such an agreement.

"They will agree to arbitrate with the understanding that the price from now on is to be fixed by the arbitrators," he said.

"What do you consider a reasonable price?" the Governor was asked.

"No, I do not," he said. "I should say three men from each side and one ask choosing arbitrators."

"Have you gone into the cost of producing milk?" the Governor was asked.

"I have some very strong opinions on that subject, but I do not wish to express them now," he said.

The Governor said he had been told by the contractors that there is no possibility of a shortage for several days, if at all; that, while admitting heavy losses from their old producers, they claim to

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling usually indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, or pain or ache in the back should also convince you that the kidneys or bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, fulfills almost every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold urine, and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild, pleasant and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful results in the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the Boston Sunday American. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

What the Milk War is About

IN accordance with the winter rates the farmers have been receiving 35½ cents per can of eight and one-half quarts from the contractors.

Last Summer the farmers were paid 28½ cents per can.

In 1900 the Summer season for milk prices included April, May, June, July, August and September.

Last year they succeeded in having the Winter rates go into effect from Sept. 1 to cover until May 1 of this year.

Farmers ask that the 35½ cents per can be paid during the coming Summer, or from to-morrow until Sept. 1.

Beginning to-day the farmers will withhold over 35,000 cans of milk from the Boston market, or about three-fifths of the city's supply.

of Worcester County and Southern New Hampshire and Vermont, who have all been heard and reported.

The Boston Co-Operative Milk Producers' Company is the name of the several organizations of the producers which serve the Boston market. Officers of the new company were elected after a close contest at the last annual meeting of the company.

The opposition, which is now lukewarm in this section, is headed by George Allen, a rich farmer of Concord, Mass., for president. Mr. Allen's term of office will end September 1, and he is pledged with Governor Draper and Attorney-General Malcolm of Massachusetts to fight the Boston & Maine Railroad Commission and State Board of Agriculture in the removal from office for discriminating in favor of the milk contractors.

Charges Trust Exists.

Mr. Allenee declares that there exists in this city a closely organized milk trust of the same character as that recently broken by Attorney-General O'Malley of New York to have New York City's milk supply. President Abbott, leader of the present effort to have the farmers' supply withheld, declares that his is a wholly different stand. He declares that there is no trust in this section, but that it is not only a very real competition between the several contractors, but a fight for their very lives, as reached the cut-throat stage in their efforts to get business.

Far from selling their milk, bought from the farmers at the price of 3½ cents a quart on an average, the year round for 8 cents a quart, at the public believes, President Abbott says that not less than 50 per cent. of the milk sold daily nedium is sold at a very much advance. For example, the Massachusetts General Hospital buys its milk supply at 38 cents a can.

The Large Consumers.

President Abbott says that a very large quantity is dipped and sold from cans in the small retail stores at from five to eight cents a quart. The big hotels, the restaurants in fact everybody who can afford to buy milk in large quantities gets it for a much smaller price than the consumers are paid.

The figures to show how much some of the contractors have invested, the number of men they employ, the cost of maintenance, depreciation of plants, etc., the sum total of which is a daily handling of close to $1,500,000 a year makes little more than 50 per cent. profit.

The meaning of all this seems to be that President Abbott and his colleagues are leading the present fight to get the farmers Winter prices or else withhold their milk. Farmers would stand a much better chance of realizing their demands were the contractors to adopt a new warring methods, and increase the price of milk to the 10 cents a quart which is charged by the producer. The farmers get more for their milk, however, himself in the city pulled sealed seals—he sent word that he would like to get rid of the milk.

His offer was accepted at first, and Mr. Lawson agreed to sit in a conference with the producers. Later discrimination by the railroads in the matter of transporting the milk to Boston, Mr. Lawson would see that the railroads furnished the farmers as many cars as they needed and at the same rates as the railroads were giving the contractors. Lawson then told the farmers that he would be ready when they got their milk to Boston to buy it from them at the same company which was to sell it.

PRINCIPLE DEARER THAN DOLLARS, SAY FARMERS' UNION

Some of the reports sent to the headquarters of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Company are interesting.

W. A. Robinson of Worcester, sent the following:

"Some 3,000 cans are daily sent out of the Ware Valley. Not a can of it goes in Boston. We are putting in a new separator at the Hampden station. Some one will have the skimmed milk house, and guess we won't starve to death for awhile. Count us in here are all for fighting for their rights."

A. H. Weddell wrote:

"Have canvassed territory from West Brimfield to West Acton. Farmers loyal and enthusiastic. Sorry we have to get into the fight, but there was nothing else to do. We can't starve."

E. D. Barr of Rutland, Vt., wired:

"Every man making milk on the line of the Rutland railway between Bellows Falls and Rutland has shut off on Boston. Never in my time has there been such almost like war time feeling. Producers say they'll throw milk on the ground before surrendering."

A. A. Leach of Pawlet, Vt., wrote:

"All the milkmen on Delaware & Hudson, Eastern New York and Western Vermont, have shut off their milk. Delaware & Hudson which has started a new creamery. Shutting down. New York has started the separators hauling and are ready to start. Delaware and Hudson and cheese."

A. L. Locke of York County, Me., wrote:

"Producers here at Kennebunk and North Berwick holding back every drop. We make nearly four cans."

A. L. Osgood, Merrimack County, N. H., wrote:

"Present prices mean ruin. Some dairymen here to will not sell a drop of milk until the contractors surrender."

Henry F. Dean of Penacook, N. H., wrote:

"Ninety per cent. of shippers over the Northern road between White River Junction and Concord, N. H., have pulled off. We'll make butter if we can, cheese if we have to and spill milk for the ditch if we must until we can. Principle is dearer to us than dollars."

OUR CAUSE BASED UPON "JUSTICE," SAYS PRESIDENT ABBOTT

President Sinclair Abbott of the Milk Producers, before taking the train for his home in Wilton, N. H., last night, said that carefully prepared data based on individual reports from dairymen and members showed absolutely that 30,000 cans had been cut off Boston's supply.

President Abbott had prepared a statement, which he requested two newspapers to publish as his official utterance, based on all the developments up to last night. It follows:

"The milk contractors have printed out the difference existing between the prices paid producers of milk for the New York, Chicago and Philadelphia markets and Boston. The Boston market, and advanced this as a reason for refusing to grant our request.

"It should be noted in this connection that all these citings draw upon a richer agricultural territory and are not in nearer the centers of distribution of the consumption. Freight is the most expensive essential to us than them, and have to be used throughout the year.

Difference in Sections.

"While the New England farmer can raise no more corn for grain or ensilage or fodder than he can fertilize, the Western man is limited only by his acres, which are all tillable, whereas the greater part of the New England farm is rocky and better suited for forest growth than agriculture.

"The New England pasturage is rapidly becoming short of feed, and for this reason, and people are fast coming to realize that the farmers' interests or other lines of agriculture such as orchards, market gardening or the like, and these are far ahead of those from dairying.

"The New England Homestead in a recent issue published a number of statements from representative farmers, the cost of milk production. These varied from $1.50 to $2.50 a hundred, and showed very fully that the return was inadequate to the producer.

"It is also said that the cost of production is higher in the summer, and we should submit for that reason.

Have Had Two Dry Years.

"This depends principally upon the pasturage, and the pastures of New England are rapidly becoming woodland for the reasons given. Moreover, we have had two exceedingly dry years, which have had their results to lessen the feed materially. It is not as easy to get full yield from cows during hot weather and Spring; help is more scarce and most producers are compelled to feed the year round.

"It is also said that some feeds are lower than a month ago. True, but this has as yet been little felt in the retail prices, and few farmers have the ready money to buy at wholesale. Further, we have no assurance that this is other than a seasonal fluctuation in the market.

"At the bottom of the whole thing is the fact that beef, and notably pork, livestock, increase especially, all depending on the same elements of cost of production, have increased in price, while milk has remained nearly stationary.

"The cost of production is based upon the eternal principles of justice and is necessary not only to the comfortable social welfare and future of New England."

HOW TO CURE ECZEMA

A New Idea That Upsets the Old Method.

The old method of treating eczema and similar skin diseases as blood disorders is being rapidly superseded by the new compound called Cadum. This remedy is applied direct to the affected parts, thus excluding the air and starting the healing process at once. The itching ceases the moment Cadum is applied, and the most stubborn cases yield to its wonderful curative powers in a remarkably short time. Other skin troubles, such as salt-rheum, psoriasis, acne, herpes, tetter, itching piles, blackheads, pimples, eruptions, etc., are also cured quickly by Cadum, which is sold by all druggists at 10c and 25c a box.

JOKE NO LONGER! FAT MEN'S CLUB HAS 1700 MEMBERS

All of 'Em—What a Crowd—Will Come to Boston for Annual Outing.

THE get a laugh out of Fred Chase, yesterday down in the wholesale grocery district, you had to pull something original, fresh and good.

Mr. Chase travels for one of our leading bluing houses. Although round, and particularitinous, and co-pulmp,—Mr. Chase was a beau-clean walking advertisement for the "line." He was the original blue-jacket from Indefinido.

The fact is, Mr. Fred Chase has had one of the most remarkable double-manufactured. He thought he was fat, at 205 avoirdupois. Everybody told him so down in the Broad Exchange Building, where they don't know the first thing about it, and so he joined the New England Fat Men's Club. Everybody told him so down in the Revere House Friday night, and—well, he is carrying a spare tire back now of the chorus, "Fat—Who? Fred Chase? Ai a meeting of the New England Fat Men's Club? Don't make anybody laugh. Is Whalley fat? Is Grafton Cushing roly-poly?

Mr. Chase Had an Idea.

One cannot blame Fred Chase. Up in West Brookline there's folks had ought to calling the boy "Slim." Down in Broad street they called him "Fat," So the honest lad got to thinking he was fat.

He was still thinking so when Uncle Johnson of Chelsea town hailed him into the Revere House and everybody sat down to luncheon and President "Bill" Quimby "dropped the gavel and called the meeting to order," and the Rev. William A. Wood of the Whidden Street Methodist Church asked grace before meals.

Then Chase says he carries 203 pounds, dressed for business.

President Quimby, who is running the Portland street, is a slip of a boy at 305. The Rev. Dr. Wood is 17 points below the 300 mark.

Not to write a whole book about Fred Chase, let it be said that he stood up worthy president, in took a good look at the reverend chaplain, he reckoned he was Parlor A for two minutes at his brother members, and six more was turned from him throughout the evening. If yesterday he felt a bit discouraged at a trifle amateurish, it was no more than natural.

Dave Wilkie Started it All.

The New England Fat Men's Club was something of a joke when ten heavy men met together one Winter's night some years ago in Hale's Tavern up at Wells River, Vt. They were seated around the fireplace—drummers fat and drummers tall—and fat—when Dave Wilkie spoke up and said:

"Here's ten of us. What do you say if we start the New England Fat Men's Club?

Today the "joke" club has a membership of 1,705.

Not only that, but the program of President Quimby, No. 17, and Portland street, Boston, Mass., calls for the biggest blow-out ever pulled off in the fat-bodied line. Commencing at 10:00 a. m. Tuesday, May 3,

MISS SOHIER A BRIDE, SOCIETY AT THE NUPTIALS

Governor at Ceremony When She Becomes Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw.

NEVER has a fairer or more stately bride plighted her troth at the altar of Trinity Church than Miss Alice Sohier, who yesterday, in a bower of lilacs, dogwood and laurel, became Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw.

Such an exquisite picture she made in her gown of white satin with long veil of point lace extending to the very tip-end of the train and fastened to her pretty blonde hair with a coronet of orange blossoms. She was escorted to the altar by her distinguished father, who later gave her in marriage in the presence of the hundreds of fashionably gowned guests.

Surrounding her at the altar and making the most interesting foil for her blonde prettiness were her three brunette attendants, gowned alike in the most delicately tinted apricot satin, veiled in apricot chiffon and picture hats of apricot straw trimmed with chiffon and plumes of the same shade. The trio included her sister Miss Dorothy Sohier, who was maid of honor, and Miss Cornelia Wolcott, daughter of the late Governor Wolcott and Mrs. Constance Ballard, the bridesmaids.

Bridegroom a Club Man.

Mr. Shaw, who is one of our best known young clubmen and who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Parkman Shaw of Marlboro street, had for his best man his brother, S. Parkman Shaw, Jr.

The ushers were William D. Foster, brother of the bride; William Bedford Rea of Gloucester street, Arthur H. Shaw of Commonwealth avenue, Harold Arrowsmith of Newport, and Chester Burden, William Bramwell, Malcolm Nicols, Amos Schermerhorn, Marshall Kernochan and Delos Kent, 2d, all of New York.

Miss Sohier is a prominent member of the Vincent and New Riding Clubs, so that smart contingent of young people was out in force. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alexander Mann and was followed by a large reception and breakfast at the Sohier home on Beacon street.

Mrs. Shaw, the mother of the bridegroom, created almost as much of a sensation as the bride and bridegroom in a beautiful, old-fashioned gown of gray chiffon over white satin and a black hat trimmed with gray plumes.

Mother of the Bride.

Mrs. Sohier, mother of the bride, arrived shortly before the bridal party and was distinguished in gray satin draped with gray chiffon and a close fitting hat of the same color.

Mrs. Wolcott Johnson was an early arrival and wore black cloth gown and a large black hat.

Mrs. John Lowell, as stunning in old gold satin veiled with black lace and a large black plume-laden hat.

Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell, wife of the president of Harvard, was in black lace.

Miss Lucy Lowell was in white.

Mrs. George A. Draper wore dark green cloth trimmed with dark green velvet and a black hat trimmed with black plumes.

Mrs. Eben S. Draper, who came with the Governor and her interesting debutante daughter, Dorothy, was in Alice blue, outlined in black chiffon and a black hat trimmed with bands of Alice blue feathers. She wore a tailored walking suit of dark navy serge.

Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., was distinguished in palest gray cloth and a large black, plume-laden hat.

Club Girls Present.

Miss Elizabeth Porter and a number of other Vincent Club girls sat in the balcony. Miss Porter wore a blue cloth suit and small turban of the same color. With her was Miss Adelaide Jackson, president of the Vincent Club, in a walking suit of dark gray cloth and a black sailor hat.

Mrs. Francis Appleton was in pale gray satin and a black hat. Mrs. Henry Parker Quincy wore black satin and small black turban. Mrs. Francis Sargent was in deep rose satin silk and Mrs. Francis Shaw wore black lace and a large black hat trimmed with plumes.

Mrs. Carteret Penno was in deep violet satin and Mrs. Horatio Curtis wore palest lavender satin and black hat trimmed with rose-colored plumes.

Mrs. Charles Cotting was in violet silk; Miss Adelaide Bigelow was in black, and Miss A. Lithgow Bowens in blue.

Mrs. Herbert Lyman was in dark blue and Miss Julia Lyman wore white cloth and a large white hat.

Mrs. J. L. Bremer was in palest lavender satin, trimmed with white lace, and Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott wore black.

Mrs. T. James Bowker was in gray satin and turban of same color, and Miss Muriel Crocker wore pale gray chiffon cloth.

Miss Marie Lee, who was with a number of Vincent girls, was in a walking suit of dark blue serge and a chic blue turban.

Distinguished Guests.

Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lyman, Mrs. Alexander Mann, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pratt Pickering, Mrs. R. L. Pritchard, Miss Georgina L. Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Putnam, Miss Frederick Sears, Mr. and Mrs. George Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Marc Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw, Miss Susan Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. S. Parkman Shaw, Miss Gertrude Warren, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ware, Jr., and Miss Grant Walker, Miss Jane Stockton, Miss Mary Sohier, Miss Elizabeth Sohier, Miss Amy Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell, Miss Lucy Lowell, Miss Olivia Lowell, Mrs. Charles E. Lawrence, Miss Marion Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Coolidge, Miss Anna C. Clarke, Miss Susan L. Clarke, Mrs. Channing Clapp, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Cabot, Mrs. John Bottrell, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brayerwell, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bramwell, Miss Mamie Bramwell, Mrs. and Mrs. J. S. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bancroft, Miss Ellen Bancroft and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Aspinwall.

GAVE WRONG ADDRESS.

Harry Edward, Fined, Didn't Live on West Newton Street.

Investigation of the case of the man who was fined $100 in Charlestown district court for stealing $15 from Abner Voodry of Somerville revealed yesterday that the defendant was giving a wrong address. He was quoted in the police report of the case as saying he lived on the corner of No. 42 West Newton street, inquiry at that address brought statement from Patrick Fallon, the landlord, that no Harry Edward, nor any other person involved in the case in question, lived there.

COLE'S CAMPAIGN FOR SURVEYOR TO SHOW WHO'S "BOSS"

With Lufkin in the Field, Too, Lodge and Crane May Come Into Open.

THE desire of John N. Cole of Andover to be Surveyor of the Port of Boston at $5,000 per annum, and the fact that Wilfred W. Lufkin of Gloucester would be glad to take the same place at union rates, led some Republicans to express the fear, or the hope, last night that United States Senators Lodge and Crane may shortly be compelled to come almost into the open with their differences of opinion concerning party management in Massachusetts.

Mr. Cole was Speaker of the House in 1906, '07 and '08. He wanted to be the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. He probably had a bigger and more forceful following than either of the Senators can command, for love alone, but the management set the switch against him at the psychological moment and put Louis A. Frothingham on the ticket. For a long time after this happening, Mr. Cole, who prints the "Townsman" at Andover, stood out on the sidewalk and hurled bricks through the machine windows. Many of them hit something. Lately Mr. Cole has "been good."

Would Take Care of Lufkin.

Wilfred W. Lufkin of Gloucester has been private secretary to Congressman Augustus Peabody Gardner for several years that Captain Gardner has been in Congress. The wages of a Congressional secretary are said to be not commensurate with Mr. Lufkin's talents for a politician. In Essex County mythology it is said that Captain Gardner hands his own pay check over to Secretary Lufkin. But this is that.

The suspicion is growing in the Sixth Congressional District that Captain Gardner may not be a candidate for Congress again, and that, naturally, he would like to "take care of" Lufkin.

John N. Cole and Augustus Peabody Gardner are not on the happiest of terms. Cole is on the best of good terms, notwithstanding, with Edwin Upton Curtis, visible head of the Republican machine in Boston and, if you listen to the politicians, right bower of United States Senator Crane.

Anybody can fill in the details. If John N. Cole gets the surveyorship, according to the gossip that was peddled yesterday in the politest hotels, "Crane victory, Gardner discomfited. Lodge grieved. If Lufkin is the man, "Cole sifted, Crane not very strong, as was thought," and so on and so on.

All of which led the young and enthusiastic friends of State Senator J. Howell Crosby of Arlington to inquire just what President of the Senate Allen Towner Treadway might have up his sleeve for the Senate dinner on Thursday night, to nominated Senator Crosby for the surveyorship.

Crosby is "Regular."

Senator Crosby is extremely "regular." He is also extremely popular. He would not decline an appointment to the surveyorship. While he makes a first-class living, as the proprietor of a florist's garden in Arlington, his friends say he hasn't been able to lay by considerable sums of money.

As Chairman of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs last year Senator Crosby handled the Boston Finance measures. He was one that was eminently satisfactory to the machine. He did what the leaders advised.

The question is," said a well informed Republican here yesterday, "Are we giving away $5,000 plums to the old chaps who hang around headquarters all the time, out of noise, like former Mayor Joe Peterson of Salem; to people who do dirty things about Republican State committees and then resign, like Postmaster Ralph Coles; to the merely decorative chaps; or will they just step in a while, pick scraps from Republicans who has always been an organization man?"

WICKERSHAM WINS POINT.

Pinchot Cannot Force Him to Produce Papers.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—By a vote of seven to five, the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee again to-day rejected the demand of Gifford Pinchot's attorney that Attorney General Wickersham be required to produce certain papers at the hearing.

The vote was along partisan lines except that Mr. Madison, insurgent of Kansas voted with the Democrats in favor of calling upon Mr. Wickersham for the papers. The request was voted upon in several different forms, but the vote was always the same.

The committee, however, unanimously adopted a motion made by Senator Fletcher, Democrat of Florida, to the effect that Mr. Carr, Ballinger's private secretary; Assistant Secretary Pierce, R. U. Sylwarter, chief of field division, and E. C. Finney, assistant to the secretary, be requested to produce any papers which they had sent to the attorney general bearing upon the Glavis charges in the Cunningham cases.

FORTIFY THE CANAL, TAFT'S MESSAGE TO HOUSE

President Confident Vast Project Will Be Completed By 1919.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The President sent a message to the House today on the Panama Canal, declaring it is this country's right and duty to fortify it. The message was accompanied by a letter on the subject from the Secretary of War, together with the report of the board of officers of the army and navy appointed for the purpose of considering the subject of the defense of the canal. In the message the President declared:

"Such works as may be erected for the defense of the canal should be completed, occupied and ready for operation at the time that the canal itself shall be completed and opened to the passage of vessels. I am encouraged to believe that this date will certainly be not later than the one which has heretofore been fixed, namely, January 1, 1915.

"The joint board, in its report to the secretary recommends an immediate appropriation of $3,000,000. It also recommends the installment of ten fourteen-inch rifles, twelve six-inch rifles and twenty-eight twelve-inch mortars, as armament."

Representative Hobson of Alabama has drafted a bill to prevent the disclosure to spies of national defense secrets which he is to introduce in the House next Monday. The purpose of the bill is to put a stop to the common practice of strangers entering navy yards, naval stations, arsenals, forts and other places where they may obtain valuable information concerning the nation's defenses.

LAWYER STOPS RUNAWAY.

Saves Women and Children by Quick Action at Quincy.

Through the daring of Attorney John D. Mackay a Quincy lawyer, a runaway accident was prevented on Hancock street, Quincy, yesterday afternoon and a number of Quincy women and children who were on the street owe their safety to the attorney's quick action. A passing auto bumped into a light delivery wagon and the horse, attached to the wagon, bolted. Attorney Mackay darted out into the middle of the street, caught the horse by the bridle and brought the animal to a sharp stop. In the melee the lawyer's right shoulder was wrenched.

WELLS'S ADMISSIONS STIR LEGISLATORS IN BANK CASE

Rebuke to Southbridge Trustees by Committee Is Forecasted.

MEMBERS of the Massachusetts Legislature said yesterday that the unexpected admissions of Trustee George Washington Wells of the Southbridge Savings Bank has made it impossible to prevent a severe arraignment of the Southbridge trustees in the report of the investigating committee. That report is due one week from Tuesday. One week from to-morrow, at Worcester, the Grand Jury meets to take up the complaint against John A. Hall, who, as treasurer of the savings bank, got away with $500,000 belonging to the depositors.

Trustee Wells, who made the 1-have-no-regrets speech on Thursday, is the big man of Southbridge. He and just returned from his Winter home at Seabreeze, Fla. He is fifty-four years old. The investigating committee, its work practically done, was called together for a final public hearing. Representative Robert A. Washburn of Worcester had some questions to ask.

Made No Inquiries.

Representative Washburn—Did you, as a trustee, ever make any inquiries as to how the auditors were performing their duties?

Mr. Wells—Never.

Representative Washburn—As a successful business man, ought you not to have recognized a greater duty as the trustee of a savings bank?

Mr. Wells—So far as my connection with the institution is concerned, I have no regrets. I can see, however, many changes in the future that ought to be made.

Representative Washburn—You had a most complete confidence in Mr. Hall?

Mr. Wells—Absolute.

Representative Washburn—Yet you know of instances where men in whom you have had complete confidence have gone wrong?

Mr. Wells—Surely. No man that is competent to be put in a place of trust but what can embezzle against the very sharpest men that employ him; that is, if he is able to hold his employment.

Trustee Wells, who gave these frank answers to Washburn's questions, is not only the big man of Southbridge, but one of the big men of Massachusetts. He is so big that his statement lead color to the declarations heard at Southbridge and at the State House, that if the present trustees of the bankrupt bank are not allowed to resume business, on practically their own terms—85 cents on the dollar—the Southbridge bank will have to cut out of business and Southbridge must get along without a savings bank. The way they state this proposition at the State House and in Southbridge is that everybody in the town big enough and strong enough and able enough to run a savings bank is already on the Board of Heads Big Concerns.

Here is the financial business of 1-have-no-regrets George Washington Wells: President American Optical Company, president Southbridge National Bank, president Central Mills Company, director Southbridge Water Supply Company, director Harrington Cutlery Company, director Warren Steam Pump Company, director Worcester Trust Company, director Worcester Manufacturing Mutual Insurance Company, director National Shawmut Bank of Boston.

Mr. Wells is a member of the Home Market Club and was three times president.

The next session of the Superior Court for criminal business in Worcester County opens at Worcester on next week from to-morrow.

The report of the committee on the $500,000 robbery will be due on the following day.

The trustees of the savings bank, nearly all of whom have admitted at the State House that they were negligent in the performance of their duties as trustees, and that it was because of this negligence that Treasurer John A. Hall was able to get away with half a million dollars belonging the the wage-earners and small farmers of that section, are expected anxious to have the bank continued without a receivership.

The report and recommendations of the Cavanaugh committee will place the blame squarely upon the shoulders of the trustees.

BOSSES, ANGERED BY WALKER, UNITE IN SPEAKER FIGHT

Republican Leaders, Aroused by Direct Vote, Blame Brookline Man.

IF the Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline walks, runs or gallops away with the Republican nomination for Governor next year he will do so over the protests of the Republican State Committee.

The Walker gubernatorial boomlet has been given the Indian sign by the State Committee. That means the "machine." That means Crane and Lodge. That means every Federal officeholder in Massachusetts. That means counties, districts, sisters and their aunts. Throw in the county rings, for good measure. Add the Congressional followings. You won't peep, but water. Mix and serve.

Hold Walker Responsible.

They hold Speaker Walker responsible, at headquarters, for the vote of 109 to 98 by which, this week, the House of Representatives went on record in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people.

They point out that Speaker Walker's floor leader, Representative James H. Knight of Boston, Republican, was the principal worker for the direct-vote bill. They have found Republican members of the Legislature who say that Knight explained to them that the Speaker was in favor of the proposition. "He wasn't," Knight is quoted as having said, "you can imagine me if I wouldn't get slugging my head off for it."

Walker's activity on behalf of this strictly Democratic measure is said to have been the final straw. From to-day on, the machine will have none of him. There will be no loud talk about it. The war will be conducted on strictly Republican lines. Speaker Walker's due to be ruled absolutely. His shadow will be regarded, for purposes of publication, as a joke.

Going Into History.

They have already begun to call attention to the fact that on January 23, 1908, Mr. Walker, then a candidate for the Speakership, was quoted in most of the Boston newspapers as having said on the previous day:

"I shall be a candidate for no other office if my ambition to be Speaker of the House of Representatives is gratified."

"He then added to his statement," according to one of the morning papers, "that he should be a candidate for no other office, be it State Treasurer, or even Governor."

Mr. Walker tells his friends nowadays that he was incorrectly reported at that time by the political reporters. The climax of his statement to them now is that he should never use the Speakership as a stepping stone to higher office.

However, the machine is likely to find the Speaker no slouch of a fighter, as becomes one who not only possesses one of the most scandalous and best strategic barrels in these parts, but who is also the son of the "Gray Eagle of the Quinsigamond."

Loaded With Money.

Speaker "Joe" Walker of Brookline is not only the son of the late Worcester Congressman, but a direct descendant of Captain Richard Walker, the fine old Indian fighter, who came across in 1630. On his mother's side the line runs back to Parson Jonathan Fisher, settled in Exeter, N. H., in 1725, and fought in the Revolution.

Possessed of no end of money, and several varieties of fighting blood, the Speaker is in a position to make things interesting for anybody who may feel next year like wrestling him for the Gubernatorial nomination.

Riley's Democratic bill was heartily supported by the Republican "Walker boys" in the Legislature. The Committee on Federal Relations had duly reported that the resolution "ought not to pass." The House, 100 to 99, substituted the Riley resolution for this report. No less than fifty Republicans voted with the eighty-eight Democrats and a Socialist in favor of substitution.

This couldn't have happened, say the others and myself, if the Crane-Lodge machine, if Speaker Walker hadn't helped. Hence the Indian sign. Hence the noise of sharpening knives. Hence, a bas Walker.

Decision Is Reserved.

QUINCY, April 30.—B. J. Regan, conductor on the Quincy street railway, appeared to-day before Judge Avery to answer the charge of manslaughter. Rowse Heal, of Brockton died in the Quincy police station, April 9, after an alleged attack by Regan. Judge Avery reserved decision until next Saturday.

TWO OF LEADERS IN DANCE PLANS FOR LYNN UNION

CORNELIA M. GOVE

MAUD M. GILMAN

Injunction Against Actress.

By the terms of an injunction issued yesterday by Justice Richardson in the Superior Court, Miss Lucinde Leclair, an actress, was restrained from appearing at an entertainment last night in the Malden Auditorium. The injunction was secured by Warren D. Pierce, who claimed to have a two weeks' contract with Miss Leclair, which, he says, did not expire until to-day.

SIX HUMBLE MEN IN THIS UNION OF 300

Lynn Union Keeps Mere Man in His Place at Dance Next Friday Night.

LYNN, April 30.—Just think of being one of six men privileged to membership in an organization made up of 300 of the prettiest young women in your city. Here in Lynn the lucky half dozen of sovereign voters who enjoy this distinction declare without dissent for woman's rights. The society is the Lynn Buttonhole Operators' Union. The girls will give their annual dance next Friday night.

Singularly enough the girls hate elected a mere man as their business agent. He is Charles P. Murray, but Charlie knows when to assert himself and just as well when to let well enough alone.

Miss Maude M. Gilman, president of the union, said to-day that the six male members of the union may be allowed to go to the dance but she just bets "they will know their place." Which is agreed to by the six.

Sadie Gadney will direct the floor. Miss Cornelia M. Gove is to be floor marshal.

DANCE FOR CHARITY.

Quincy Catholic Club to Hold Party Wednesday Night.

The Quincy Athletic Club will hold its annual whist and dancing party in Alpha Hall next Wednesday evening. The proceeds will be devoted to charitable purposes.

Leo G. McMasters will be floor director. His aids will be George B. Gavin, Edward J. Murphy, Daniel J. Deasy, Thomas J. Murphy, Joseph A. Dushin, Charles C. Heard, Lawrence W. Lynes, John W. Walsh, John J. Deasy, Edward L. Bean, J. J. McDonnell, Timothy J. Carey, Edward D. Barrett, Walter E. Eldred, W. L. Russell and William J. Biganess.

To Address Baptists.

In Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple, tomorrow at 10:30 a. m., John Duthoy, of England, will make an address before the Baptist ministers. H. H. Hare will sing special selections.

SCHOOL BOYS HELP MAYOR PLANT TREES

Three Fine Young Elms Are Set Out During Arbor Day Exercises.

Mayor Fitzgerald did his share in Arbor Day observance yesterday by planting three young elm trees. He was assisted at every planting by school children, newsboys and other youthful spectators who enthusiastically shoveled on dirt after the Mayor had led the way.

The three trees the Mayor set out are on Boston Common, on the Bunker Hill Grounds, Monument avenue, Charlestown, and at Copps Hill burying ground.

The Mayor arrived at the Common at 2:30 p. m., accompanied by Superintendent D. H. Sullivan of the Public Grounds Department. The tree was in position on the lower end of Park-street mall about ten feet from the south-bound entrance to Park-street subway.

The Charlestown tree was set out on the south side of the Bunker Hill grounds on Monument avenue. A delegation from the Charlestown Improvement Society and 300 school boys and girls greeted the Mayor. He made a brief address. At Copps Hill burying ground the cemetery trustees and scores of school children were on hand.

The Ruskin Club planted an English birch near Scarlet pond, Franklin Park, in memory of John Ruskin. The Massachusetts Women's Christian Temperance Union planted four trees on Massachusetts avenue.

BEQUESTS FOR CHARITY

Wills of Somerville Women Filed in Probate Court.

Two Somerville women whose wills were filed yesterday in the Middlesex County Probate Court in Cambridge, left money to charitable institutions. Ellen Dalton, who died April 18, 1910, left $50 to the Working Boys' Home of Boston. Hannah J. Fuller, who died April 14, left $200 to the Somerville Home for the Aged, $200 to the Congregational Church Building Society of Boston, $100 to the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, $200 to the Boston Seamen's Friend Society, $100 to the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, $100 to the Wellesley Congregational Church and $100 to the Prospect Hill Congregational Church of Somerville.

SALEM BIG FREIGHT CENTER FOR B. & M.

Railroad Will Spend Several Million Dollars Improving Transportation Facilities.

SALEM, April 30.—The management of the Boston & Maine Railroad has started work improving transportation facilities here involving an expenditure of several million dollars, intending to make Salem one of the principal freight centers of the eastern part of New England.

Salem, on account of its location, has long been recognized as an ideal place for an important freight terminal to relieve Boston of its continual state of congestion. It is understood that the recent conference between President Tuttle and committee representing the Essex County and Merrimack Valley Boards of Trade, at which much stress was laid upon the poor freight service which was being served by the railroad in this direction.

For many years all freight from the northeastern section of New England to Western points has been handled through Boston, the Boston & Maine taking care of all the charges up to Boston, also the taking charge from one station to the other in the consummation of the through rate of shipping point to destination.

NO REASON FOR PIMPLES
New Healing Agent Causes Them to Disappear.

The dispensers of posiqin, the new skin discovery, ask that notice be given that no one is urged to purchase it without first obtaining the sample package, which will be sent free to any one who writes to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York. This is usually enough to clear the complexion and to rid the face of pimples. Every one who has tried posiam knows that the 50-cent box, on sale at all of Hiker, Jaynes Drug Stores and drug dept. Houghton & Dutton's, as well as all other drug stores, contains sufficient for the worst cases of eczema, where the surface affected is not too large. The itching ceases on first application. It will also cure acne, tetter, blotches, scaly skin, hives, barber's and every other form of itch, by clearing them first. Being medicated and containing no grease, the presence of posiam on exposed parts is not noticed, as for face and hands. It is prescribed, after and soap cannot be used in connection with it, in those irritate and long skin troubles, sometimes even causing them

SUNDAY, MAY 1, 1910. SUNDAY, MAY 1, 1910.

M'CLELLAN PUTS RESPONSIBILITY DIRECTLY UP TO GAYNOR

BY WESTERN UNION CABLE.

To the Editor of the New York American: Florence, Italy, April 30, 1910.

In the last days of my administration Chamberlain Martin called my attention to the forty-eight thousand dollar warrant to Cohalan. AS THE AMOUNT SEEMED EXCESSIVE for the work alleged to have been performed, I directed Martin to secure the warrant in the Finance Department and return it to me.

In the rush of leaving office I had no time to investigate, and directed the chief clerk in the Mayor's office TO HOLD UP THE WARRANT AND CALL MY SUCCESSOR'S ATTENTION TO IT IMMEDIATELY AFTER JANUARY FIRST. I am confident that the chief clerk obeyed.

The amount may have been justified, but I DID NOT AUTHORIZE ITS PAYMENT.

CANNON ATTACKS TARIFF'S FOES, FLAYS HIS CRITICS

In Boston Speech Speaker Renews War on Insurgents and Criticises His Opponents Who Want to Drive Him from Power

GREETED by a riot of applause, and round after round of cheers Speaker Joseph G. Cannon of the National ... the Middlesex Club at the ... Somerset last night his own side of ... Cannon story.

He defended the Payne-Aldrich tariff ... He attacked the Democrats and the opponents of Speaker Cannon's rules of the House ... closing he said that he hoped the next Congress would be better than the present one; also that he hoped it would be more strongly Republican. This sentiment naturally made a tremendous hit with the audience.

The Middlesex Club was observing ... night. A portrait of the Speaker ... suspended over the guests' table. Speaker Cannon declared that the critics of Taft ... floored the president of most ... who clamor for a ... which will receive popular approval at the moment.

Black Also a Speaker.

Over 600 members of the Middlesex Club attended. Former Congressman Samuel L. Powers, presided at the function as toastmaster. On his right at the head table sat Speaker Cannon. On his left was Governor Draper, also speaker ... Other speakers were former Governor Frank L. Black of New York and William ... McElfresh, the New York editor.

At the speakers' table were also present ... State Chairman Murray Crane, Governor ... Powers introducing Governor Draper as the first speaker, said:

"Governor Draper will be with us a year from to-night as Governor and ..."

This brought big applause. When the Governor rose to speak he said at first that the propositions of President Powers that I shall be Governor for another term is true. I hope I may be Governor again.

The address of Speaker Cannon was the principal one of the evening. He said:

One of the weaknesses of age is the tendency to live in the past, but it is true that the contests of those who have gone before their battles for correct policies in war and peace, their efforts to write those policies into legislation, their struggles against the counsels of the wrong, the arrogant, the selfish and the demagogue, constitute a glorious heritage ... the timber of the people who have ... and furnish examples well ... for emulation by the present generation of ... Ulysses S. Grant.

Grant and the Demagogue.

General Grant seems to have been a strictly normal man. He had no fanatic enthusiasm or passion, and no lawless development of any kind. He had no one of the dramatic and failed to do those things which imaginarily appeal to the public eye. He was a great leader all circumstances that he seems to have some untoward some of his most ... nature ... those about him, even to the ... Who ever heard of Grant ... dancing, fencing, was never? Meanest Thief Yet! Stole Bouquets From Vincent Club Girls

Low Down Rascal Hunted by Handsomest Corps of Amateur Detectives Ever Organized.

The girls of the Vincent Club have put their just ... to the task of catching the person who is ... the meanest thief on earth. Take ... defenceless individual as the ... down rascal who stole in behind the scenes at the Vincent Club theatricals in Jordan Hall, and "pinched" the bouquets which had been handed over the footlights to the performers by their admiring friends. The flowers were elected left on the scenes for safe-keeping. When the girls looked for them later there were no bouquets. But there was the maddest lot of girls Boston ever knew.

The girls did not report the theft ... police. They said: "We will catch the thief ourselves."

Every ... girl is an amateur detective now. They say that girls smart enough to put on the clever Vincent Club ... have enough ability to track a flower thief.

Just how they are going to run the thief down the girls do not say but the ... a search is on and ... they say.

Cohalan Claim Was Reallowed After Gaynor Knew It Was Held Up of the same document clearly printed in type in the text of the article.

MAYOR GAYNOR IS DODGING THE ISSUE

What a petty quibble for an important man—or rather what a quibble for a petty man who holds an important position.

Anybody, who knows the high character of the gentlemen who edit the American, knows that no matter how much they might despise Mayor Gaynor they would never seek to take an unfair advantage of him.

Anybody who knows the ethics of the gentlemen who edit the American knows that if they had desired to omit the date of any document they would not have been so childish as to print the date conspicuously in the type while they were leaving it out of the picture.

Finally, anybody who can read and think can see clearly that the date in question is not the important date anyhow, but that the important date is the date of January fourth, a date in Mayor Gaynor's administration upon which the payment to Cohalan of $48,000 was finally signed and actually authorized.

The January fourth signature was affixed by the assistant chamberlain in the office of Chamberlain Hyde, Mr. Gaynor's law partner.

Mr. Gaynor gentleman, who is popularly known as "Gaynor's thick-Hyde," is not only Gaynor's law partner, but the person who figured conspicuously in Gaynor's golf ball decision in favor of race gambling.

The two constitute the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of law and politics.

Mr. Chamberlain Hyde claims that his assistant chamberlain is a holdover from the last administration.

But assuredly he is a very PERMANENT holdover, for he is still assistant chamberlain, although the last administration has been four months out of office.

Mr. Hyde goes so far as to explain why this same assistant chamberlain was not allowed to sign the Cohalan warrant under the last administration and why he was allowed to sign the warrant under the present administration.

WHY DO NOT MR GAYNOR AND "HIS THICK-HYDE" discuss the date of January 4, about which there is merely a question of bad administration?

Why do Mr. Gaynor and Mr. Hyde so earnestly seek to avoid the real question at issue and devote themselves to the technicalities of newspaper criticism?

Mr. Gaynor says the American was not printed clearly.

I say that Mr. Gaynor does not ANSWER clearly.

And the really important thing is for Mr. Gaynor, Mayor of New York, guardian of the people's money, to answer clearly and quickly.

Say your law partner paid the warrant if you please Mr. Gaynor, say our law partner's assistant paid it, if you please, but at least explain why a warrant which the former administration held up as exorbitant was paid your administration without question and without investigation

ANSWER MAYOR GAYNOR, AS A MATTER OF DUTY, AS A MATTER OF DECENCY AND AS A MATTER OF POLICY

How About This, Mr. Gaynor?

Was not Cohalan the intermediary between you and Charley Murphy, and a hot help to you in getting you the Tammany Hall nomination?

Was not Cohalan concerned in the attempt to steal for you the nomination of the Independence League, which piece of political porch climbing justice Gerard, an honest judge, effectually stopped?

Did not Comptroller Pendergast, after you had been seated as Mayor call your attention to the warrant for Cohalan's $48,000 which was in your office

Did you not thank Comptroller Pendergast and say that it was true that so that if you would send the warrant back to him he would make a complete report on it and go to the bottom of the matter?

Did you not thank Comptroller Pendergast and say that it was true that those lawyers in such cases were getting too much from the city?"

Did you not then fail to send the warrant back to the comptroller and fail to ask for the report, did you not, on the contrary, allow this padded fee to go through unquestioned on January 4, 1907?

Still talking about the date that did not print, and say a few words about the date that DID print

To your blatherskite abuse I am indifferent, for in all such matters I consider the source and the natural irritation that a political official feels in being exposed

A man or a newspaper that seeks sincerely to serve the people and protect their rights and their property must always expect the antagonism and abuse of the public official who is exposed and pilloried.

When the San Francisco Examiner first attacked and exposed Mayor Patrick H. McCarthy of San Francisco, that indignant individual denounced the Examiner as a public enemy and had the entire board of supervisors pass resolutions denouncing the paper and assailing me

Everybody knows to-day what happened to Schmitz And everybody, except would rather have Schmitz's abuse than his commendation.

When the New York Journal first attacked and exposed District Attorney Jerome, that outraged prosecutor [illegible] to court to denounce the Journal and its people. [illegible] what happened [illegible] and don't happened to the libel [illegible] The people are going eventually to find you out and repudiate you, and then both you and your THICK HYDE.

And even those newspapers that are now truckling and lickspittling to you in the hope of securing the city advertising will in the end sacrifice those lucrative contracts to the precious privilege of telling the truth about you.

THAT IS GOING TO HAPPEN TO YOUR NEWSPAPER.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

Gaynor Never Asked Report on the Warrant for Cohalan

By W. A. PRENDERGAST, Comptroller of New York.

My knowledge of the warrant in favor of Mr. Daniel F. Cohalan is as follows:

Just as I reached the Comptroller's Office on New Year's Day, Deputy Comptroller Mathewson told me that Chamberlain Martin had mentioned to him, with the request that he convey the information to me, that a warrant in favor of Daniel F. Cohalan for $48,000 had been passed through the Comptroller's Office during the preceding few days, and was at that time in the Mayor's Office; that Mayor McClellan, having discovered that the warrant had been signed by his office, had sent for it and stricken out the signature affixed by the clerk.

Mr. Mathewson said that the suggestion had also been made that I should recall the warrant from the Mayor's Office. I told him that I would think the matter over, and a little later in the morning, during the reception, I told Mr. Mathewson that I had come to the conclusion that the warrant, having passed through the Comptroller's Office, it would not be a proper thing for me to recall it, thus reflecting upon the action of my predecessor, unless there was some excellent reason why the warrant should not have been paid; that the mere fact that the warrant was in favor of Mr. Cohalan did not constitute any such reason, but that I had made up my mind to talk to the Mayor about it.

A little later Chamberlain Martin came into the office, and I told him what I intended to do. About 1 o'clock that day I called upon the Mayor with Mr. Metz and Borough President Steers, and was received by the Mayor in his private office. After Mr. Metz and Borough President Steers had left the office I remained, and then told the Mayor just what I have described above. He asked me why Mayor McClellan had taken the action he did. I told him that I did not know the reasons. He then asked me what the warrant represented, and I told him that my understanding was that it was for services in connection with disputed franchise tax cases. He then said to me: "We must be very careful about passing large bills to lawyers in these matters."

The Mayor then said: "If you had not told me about this I suppose the matter would have gone right through in the ordinary course." I said: "I presume that is what would have happened." He then replied: "It was very nice of you to speak of this to me. What ought to be done about it?" I told him that if he wanted to return the warrant to the Comptroller's Office I would be very glad to make a report to him upon it.

Nothing further transpired regarding the matter until a few days after, when a representative of the Sun called to see me and asked me if I knew anything about a warrant in favor of Mr. Cohalan. I then told him exactly what I have already stated

An article upon the subject appeared in the Sun the next morning, or very soon thereafter, and nothing more was heard about the matter until the story appeared in the American some few weeks ago

WARRANT LEFT FOR GAYNOR, SAYS METZ

BY HERMAN A. METZ.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Herman A. Metz, comptroller of the city under the administration of Mayor McClellan, issued this statement:

The claim for Mr. Cohalan reached the Comptroller's office in the regular course of business, and was sent to the auditing department, following the course that all vouchers follow, under the law, before they can be paid—that is, to be audited by an auditor of accounts. It being for legal services, instead of going through the regular auditing bureau, it went to the Law and Adjustment Division, where examinations of this sort of claims were always made.

After examination of the claimant, the Law and Adjustment Division advised a reduction of about $5,000 on the claim as submitted. If I remember correctly, it was originally $53,000. Mr. Cohalan would not settle until the examiner as to the exact number of days put in for which he had charged.

After his result was reached the matter came to me for approval. This was three days before the first of the year. Mr. Cohalan came to see me and said he could not do the reduction. The matter had been hanging fire for quite a while and he was anxious to get paid for his services. There was no reason for treating Mr. Cohalan's claim any different from any claim that came from any other lawyer.

I told Mr. Cohalan at the time that I objected if the matter could be passed through the various channels before 12 o'clock, as I had not signed a warrant since [illegible] I had been appointed comptroller. I thereupon gave orders to let it go on regular schedule to the auditing comptroller's room for the regular way it was signed by Assistant Deputy Comptroller Smith, sent to the Mayor's office, and after it reached there was signed by the Mayor's chief clerk and transmitted to the chamberlain for signature.

The [illegible] of the Manhattan Bridge, with Mayor McClellan on the 31st of December, had before left office, passed on to the 1st. I got rid of the Cohalan claim, strictly [illegible] I had been approved by the auditing comptroller, approved by the deputy comptroller, [illegible] $5,000 from the original, and [illegible] there was no reason to hold it up, and [illegible] if I did it might be construed as a personal favor to Mr. Cohalan, and I did not want to do anything of the kind, so I passed it on to the Mayor's office.

Mr. Metz [illegible] returning to the office later in the afternoon of the 31st, [illegible] I told him I had refused to sign the warrant and had passed it on to the Mayor's office, as the Mayor's office was [illegible] of my action. I told him that I objected to signing any warrants that had been [illegible] of my predecessor in office, and that I would not sign any [illegible] until after the new administration took office.

I never had any talk [illegible] or regarding it, of course, until the 4th or 5th of January, after I was commanded to the newspapers and [illegible] Mr. Cohalan called me up on the [illegible] I told him the warrant had been [illegible] and that I had refused to sign it, and [illegible] I had no [illegible] that I had made [illegible] and that I had passed it on to the Mayor's office.

Law on Payment of Vouchers —From New York City Charter

Section 195 • • • The Chamberlain shall pay all warrants drawn on the treasury by the Comptroller and countersigned by the Mayor, or the chief clerk of the Mayor, WHEN EMPOWERED BY THE MAYOR IN WRITING SO TO DO, and no moneys shall be paid out of the treasury except on the warrant of the Comptroller as countersigned. No such warrant shall be signed by the Comptroller or countersigned by the Mayor except upon vouchers for the expenditure of the amount named therein, examined and allowed by an auditor of accounts, approved by the Comptroller and filed in the Department of Finance. • • • The Chamberlain shall not draw any moneys of the city treasury from said banks or trust companies (city depositories) unless by checks subjoined and attached to such warrants and subscribed by him as Chamberlain. • • •

THE MAYOR'S EXCUSE.

Private Secretary Adamson made the following statement for Mayor Gaynor

"The Mayor is not required to sign warrants at all. They are made out and signed by the Comptroller, and then by the chief clerk of the Mayor's office under authority to Section 195 of the charter. The Mayor has never signed one

"Some one told the Mayor the first or second day he was in office that Chamberlain Martin had had this draft up, as he was unfriendly to Mr. Cohalan. Whether is was Comptroller Prendergast or some one else the Mayor does not recall, nor do I. How the story originated that some signature was scratched off the draft I do not know. The draft is still complete just as it was drawn and signed before the present Mayor came into office. Here it is, look at it.

"The claim was for legal services in the franchise tax suits. Several lawyers were paid, including Judge Parker. The claim was audited and fixed by the Comptroller in December, after much evidence was taken, and thereby became a legal claim against the city. Mayor Gaynor never had anything to do with it."

PROVE GAYNOR'S STAND IS ABSURD

NEW YORK, April 30.—The statements printed in this morning's American from Comptroller Prendergast, former Comptroller Metz and former City Chamberlain Martin conclusively establish the absurdity of Mayor Gaynor's effort to avoid responsibility for the payment of $48,000 of the city's money to Cohalan. The history of the transaction, as told by the three men, Prendergast, Metz and Martin, is as follows:

On Friday, December 31, 1909, a warrant for $48,000 in favor of Cohalan was signed by J. S. Curran, Mayor McClellan's sitting clerk, and was sent to City Chamberlain James J. Martin. It [illegible] later [illegible] Martin received a message from Mayor McClellan's secretary directing that the warrant be returned to the Mayor's office. The City Chamberlain complied with the request.

On Saturday morning, January 1, 1910, the City Chamberlain called upon Comptroller Prendergast that the Cohalan warrant had been returned by him to the Mayor's office.

Mayor Was Warned.

Comptroller Prendergast immediately went to Mayor Gaynor's office and informed Mayor Gaynor of the fact that he had sold to him, telling him that the Cohalan warrant was then in Mayor McClellan's office. Mayor Gaynor told Comptroller Prendergast that the warrant and Comptroller Prendergast [illegible] that it was for [illegible] to close tax cases.

Mayor Gaynor said [illegible] "those tax cases which were [illegible] everybody knew [illegible] were [illegible] out of the city.

Mayor Gaynor then asked Comptroller Prendergast what he thought ought to be done with the warrant. Comptroller Prendergast said that the matter had passed out of the Comptroller's hands and it was up to Mayor Gaynor to [illegible] Mayor McClellan's recall of the warrant, and invalidated the signature.

Comptroller Prendergast [illegible] warning by saying that if Mayor Gaynor wanted him to make a report to him the matter he should send the warrant back to the Comptroller's office with a request for a report, and that he would then investigate the matter from top to bottom.

Mayor Gaynor thanked Comptroller Prendergast for putting him on [illegible] about the matter and said that [illegible] The warrant might have gone through and he would not have known about it.

Mayor Gaynor never sent the warrant back to the Comptroller's office or requested a report. Instead, the warrant was sent back to the Mayor's office by Chamberlain Martin [illegible] Mayor McClellan [illegible] Messrs. WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.—The Speed Boys [illegible] Walker to the woods and defeated Washington handily by the score of 5 to 3. With a lead of three runs for the Bostons in the first inning, it looked like a runaway race and short hits for Karger but the Reds nightcapped it [illegible] shooting to their front in the ninth for a permanent lead.

The Red Sox would have had more runs but Rudd or Stahl base running buried a brace two runs.

The absence of Speaker didn't hurt a little as Hooper headed nicely and garnered three hits, while Niles also scored three singles.

Senators Fielded Well.

The Washington boys put up a fine fielding game pulling off three double plays but they ammounted to nothing as Boston batted hitting of the Red Sox [illegible] almost to the end of the game. Gerber's [illegible] down Corriganes [illegible] line fly. Unlucky [illegible] on his toes after diving under Freeman's [illegible] fly; McBride captured a fly in short left with one hand and doubled Wagner at second, and Ellerfeld made a great one handed catch of Walker's wild throw enabling Wagner to score.

Karger got a hard start in the first inning as he beat out an infield hit and made second on Milan's sacrifice. Gessler [illegible] after that and then scored [illegible] Washington's runs came in the [illegible] Milan beat out one, Walker [illegible] Schaefer out, Karger to Stahl. Leibold [illegible] down a safe bunt to left. Milan [illegible] third. Leibold stole second. Ellerfeld beat a bounder over second and scored Milan scoring. Gessler hit a bounder to Lord who threw to Stahl forcing Leibold, Leibold and Ellerfeld scoring and the batter taking second on the throw. [illegible] Ingram's [illegible] Mc[illegible] for a double play. French to Wagner to Stahl.—Three runs.

McBride's Great Catch.

The Red Sox almost caught up in the fourth. Niles singled to centre. Hooper singled to right, Niles taking third. Stahl singled to right, scoring Niles, Hooper going to third. Wagner singled to centre, scoring Hooper. Lewis singled, Wagner also filling the bases. Moir [illegible] great one-handed catch of Morkis, on a short left and doubled Wagner at second on quick throw to Ellerfeld. Karger [illegible] fanned.

In the sixth the Red Sox got one run over the rubber and tied the score. Hooper singled to left and advanced Walker to [illegible]. Wagner sing[illegible] to right scoring Hooper, and went to second on the throw home by Gessler. Lewis walked. Carrigan bunted to Walker and Wagner was headed off at third by Gessler to Ellerfeld. Karger forced Carrigan at second. Ellerfeld to Schaefer.

Boston's Grand Final.

The grand final came in the seventh. French [illegible] to Lord out. Lord out, Schaefer to Unglaub. Niles [illegible] to right and went to second on the throw that turned back Engle. Hooper [illegible] singled to right, scoring Engle and Niles, and was out trying to [illegible] second on throw home, Walker to McBride.

Gessler [illegible] Walker [illegible] Gray went on the rubber as a forlorn hope, but got the only [illegible] of the day. He did well in the final two innings, no more runs being made.

The local fans were hopeful of a grand rally in the last inning, although Street was hit by a pitched ball and Bangs was the master to the [illegible].

MAY STOP BIG FIGHT AS RESULT OF DEATH OF CALIFORNIA BOXER

Ministers Association and Church Federation Demand That Governor Prevent Jeffries and Johnson From Meeting in State—Owen Moran, Whose Blow Caused McCarthy's Death, Confesses the Bout Was a Frame-up.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 30.—The death [illegible] of Jimmy McCarthy, a local light [illegible] against the pugilist, as the result of [illegible] and subsequent fall at the hands of Owen Moran, the English prize fighter, are fanned into flame a deep-set antagonism against the holding of the Johnson-Jeffries prize fight on July 4 at Emeryville. In a row the bay from this city.

[illegible] be stopped, will cause [illegible] more concerted action on the part of those who are determined to stop what they term "brutal spectacle and a blot on the fair name of the State of California."

The Methodist Ministers' Association of Oakland and Berkeley already [illegible] the Church Federation of this city will ask Governor Gillett to call off the fight. Owen Moran, who [illegible] suffering from [illegible] and [illegible] Moran is held on [illegible] Moran mourned the death of his opponent, and plainly showed his trepidation.

"Poor, poor boy" he said, weeping. "It was an accident, but such a terrible one."

Then, wiping his eyes, the Englishman [illegible] the fight was a frame up, the [illegible] Jeffries nor Johnson, he declared, is likely seriously to hurt the other.

Referee and Police Blamed.

Laying the blame for McCarthy's death on the referee and police for not interfering, District Attorney Fickert announced he would bring the matter before the Grand Jury.

The local church federation has acted simultaneously with others throughout the state in sending a message to the Governor demanding that he prohibit the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Chief of Police John D. Martin said to-day:

"The game undoubtedly will be given a black eye in this town for some time to come because of McCarthy's death. So far as I know, no official action will follow his death unless I am satisfied the regulations governing such contests were violated in last night's fight. There is always one of those unfortunate accidents that sometimes mar the pugilistic game as well as in the game of football."

Tex Rickard, one of the promoters, does not think it will have any effect. Neither Jeffries nor Johnson, he declared, is likely seriously to hurt the other.

PIRATES SHUT OUT OLD CUB RIVALS, 1-0

Flynn, Pittsburg's New First Sacker, Bats Out His Second Successive Victory.

PITTSBURG, April 30.—Pittsburg World's champions shut out the former title holders this afternoon before the largest crowd of the season. The Cubs were beaten, 1 to 0, the same score by which they downed the Pirates in the first meeting of the year.

Bill Powell, one of Clarke's young pitchers, was opposed to Miner Brown, but he pitched rings around the three-fingered wonder. Powell allowed the Cubs only two hits, and they got to first only three times and third—nine once.

The Pirates gave their shutout the support and batted well behind him, but Brown succeeded in keeping their seven hits well scattered, save for one inning, when on Miller's single, his steal of second and Flynn's double, the second stole and, of the game, the Pirates scored the run that proved to be enough to win.

This is the second time Pittsburg's new first sacker has won by succession and that run has by seems to have demonstrated to the satisfaction of all concerned Miller's ability to [illegible] The score:

THE KLING CASE BUTTS INTO THE AFFAIRS OF FANNY FAN AND FREDDIE---By HARRIS

NELSON WILL SHOW IN TOWN THIS WEEK

Bat More Popular On Circuit Than When He Held Lightweight Title.

Battling Nelson, even more popular than when he was the recognized lightweight champion of the world, is due to arrive in Boston tomorrow morning from Newark. In the evening Nelson will start a week's engagement at the Columbia Theatre. John R. Robinson, of Boston, Nelson's manager, has been in Boston for the past two days arranging for the Durable Dane's reception.

In four weeks Nelson will quit the stage and retire to his ranch at Otero, New Mexico, where he will take a three months' [illegible] Walgast in an effort to regain the title he lost on Washington's birthday.

Nelson, who is singing "Work," said Robinson last night, "And but for our [illegible] would have been presented [illegible] Thanksgiving. The theatrical manager, Sid Hoey, offered us $1,500 or a percentage of 50 per cent. We took the $1,500. Had we taken the percentage Nelson and his wife would have got $1,475. Again in Pittsburg Hoey offered Nelson $1,100 and 40 per cent. We took the difference in a percentage. At Cleveland we did not do quite so well, getting $1,800. Now we are declining that salary offer and heading south over the Keith circuit, Nelson dress the people to the house, and feels that wherever he goes he should have the benefit.

"There is more we have to work [illegible] We will get $14,275 for the week. JEFFRIES' NEED TO UNITE OLD ENEMIES, CORBETT AND CHOYNSKI

Politics is said to make strange bedfellows, but not more so than when all of the best boxing talent in the world is trying to help a white man arrest the heavyweight championship title from a negro.

James J. Corbett and Joe Choynski are to be Jeffries's chief aids in preparing for the great battle of July 4, and to the general sporting public the prospect of Corbett and Joe Choynski lying down together in peace, bucks the old lion and lamb story clear off the boards.

Corbett has been in Boston for the past week, playing at the American Music Hall. He ridicules the prospect of the old enmity between them breaking out again anew, and says that all differences will be laid aside and each man will do his best for Jeff.

Corbett's story of his early battles with Choynski, ending with the famous fifteen barge fight, makes interesting reading, and here it is as he told it the other day in his dressing room at the theatre:

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

It really is a strange coincidence that Choynski and I will be together in Jeffries' training camp, both doing our to put him in fit trim to win back his

This is probably the last fight that I will ever have anything to do with, and the deepest in Choynski and I were mixed up together in the first fighting that I ever knew anything about. In fact it was my professional debut, the first three or four fights I ever fought.

All this talk about there being friction between Choynski and myself is all [illegible] I have not a [illegible] Choynski and I were [illegible] fight and we didn't come to blows, so we are not going to now.

Inasmuch as I gave Choynski a bad licking every time we have fought, there is no reason why I should bear him any grudge. I am not going out there to run Jeff's camp, or to take charge of his training. I am simply going out there to look after Jeffries' interests, to do what I can to help [illegible]

HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION TO LOOK OVER ROADS OF THE NORTH SHORE

Crippled Children to Be Given Long Auto Ride by Boston Dealers.

By J. C. Kerrison.

An inspection of the improved roads of Eastern Massachusetts is to be made by the members and friends of the Massachusetts Highway Association on Wednesday next.

This inspection cannot help but be decidedly interesting, and to a degree beneficial to the members of the organization and all interested in road preservation and construction, as it will give participants an opportunity to inspect construction work on a great many miles of highway.

It is an admitted fact that the pretty general use of the motor vehicle has brought about a need for different road preservation and construction from that in vogue some ten or twelve years ago.

No subject has ever received more intelligent consideration than the matter of roads nor in the hands of the chief road engineers of the world at large. Here in Massachusetts, always considered as a leader in road construction, the work has been decidedly active and progressive, the result being that the State has kept pretty well to the fore on the matter of roads.

State Takes Lead.

In this work the Massachusetts Highway Association, organized in 1903, has been particularly active and successful. It has ever taken the greatest of pains to emphasize the needs of proper road construction and maintenance, having held frequent meetings to discuss and consider the questions.

This tour of inspection is really the quarterly meeting of the organization, and owing to the kindness of President Lewis R. Speare of the American Automobile Association, it has been made possible to hold the same en route as it were. He has secured from his friends and members of the local trade a sufficient number of automobiles to carry the party over the best roads of Eastern Massachusetts, so that those who ride may read the ripple of good roads.

The party will leave Arlington street at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, going through Somerville, Everett, Revere, Beachmont, Lynn, Swampscott, Beverly, North Beverly, Wenham, Hamilton, Ipswich, over roads that are all macadam, the greater portion being either parkways or State highways.

View North Shore.

At Ipswich there will be a change in character of the roadway, as the party will then switch to the old Newburyport turnpike, recognized as one of the best through roads in the State, to Newburyport and back to Ferncroft Inn and Middleboro. This turnpike is the one that efforts are now being made to have turned into a State highway so that it can be graded and reconstructed from Maplewood to Newburyport.

The chances are that it will be treated as a local road, not as a State highway, and that within a year the grades between the two points named will be altered considerably, and the roadbed put in more serviceable condition.

A meal of no mean order is to be made at Ferncroft Embowling during the return division will be made with Andover, Billerica, Middlesex Fells, Medford, Malden, Revere Beach, Winthrop, Point of Pines, Lynn, Swampscott, Marblehead, Salem, Beverly, Manchester, Hamilton, Wenham, Ipsw[illegible] to the starting point.

The success of the whole undertaking is considered to lengthen the association will have covered fully 100 miles of the best roads to be found to the north of Boston.

Help Crippled Children.

[illegible] members of the Highway Association in relation to the entertainment of [illegible] and unfortunate children [illegible] In order to [illegible] for such a large number as this it is estimated that something like 200 motor cars will be necessary. Secretary Chester I. Campbell of the association has sent out some 1,500 letters to the dealers of the State informing them of the plans [illegible] and seeking their support in securing cars. He suggests that each dealer provide his own car, and ask them to assist the work by securing the use of their cars on that day. Rather than [illegible] to solicit cars in this section a similar letter with the request that they notify him of their willingness to participate in the good cause.

The children will be taken to the Lake Shore Home in Sharon, and, as heretofore, receive the hospitality of the Rev. H. L. Bean of that organization.

Death Shocks Friends.

C. L. MacIntosh, president of the Pierce Engine Motor Company and treasurer of the J. I. Case Company, died in Naples on April 19. Mr. MacIntosh was abroad in search of health, and had been [illegible] ill. It was not suspected [illegible] that his death came as a great shock to his host of friends here.

USE CADILLACS FOR EXPERIMENTS

In the line with the policy adopted in recent years by leading technical schools and institutions throughout the country, instructors in such schools are giving their students valuable object lessons in the mechanical construction and workmanship. The Cadillac Thirty was selected with a definite view for the study of the sort mentioned.

Several schools which have taken up the subject of motor car construction have recognized the Cadillac as representative of the higher forms of mechanical work. The latest instance of the kind was in Rochester, N. Y., where the class of about 90 mechanical students from the Rochester Institute was taken to the salesroom of the local Cadillac dealer and listened to a lecture which covered the making of every part of the car and the final assembly of the automobile.

Being built on a scale of measurements wherein the thousandth part of an inch is the limit of variation permitted in even the finer hundredth parts, the Cadillac seems particularly adapted to serve as the basis for a lecture on mechanical accuracy.

Lauds Boston Man.

E. E. Beake, general sales manager of the Regal Company of Detroit, is spending a few days in Boston as the guest of Local Manager Maity. He speaks most enthusiastically of the motor prospects throughout the country. He paid a great tribute to Mr. Maity's work, which has resulted in the prosperity of the Regal in this section, calling some seven different makes

SUCCESSFUL YEAR FOR STEVENS-DURYEA

"This has been one of [illegible] seasons that has ever been experienced by the Stevens-Duryea since its [illegible] into the motor world," stated H. B. Bowman, New England distributor of the [illegible] made at Chicopee, Massachusetts. "We have [illegible] Mr. Bowman, "done a record [illegible] of business, and could have done more had we the cars to deliver. It is not by any means a question of [illegible] sell, but rather one of how many cars we can get deliveries on.

"The fundamental principle of Stevens-Duryea construction are such as have been recognized the world over and have resulted in no small measure in making the Stevens-Duryea the high class car that it is today.

"One of our customers recently had the delivery of a six-cylinder car [illegible] from the close of the Boston show in March last, and since then has driven 5,000 miles without experiencing the slightest trouble or even making a single adjustment."

Babcock Cars Ready.

The White-Robbins Motor Company of Boston street has received a large shipment of the Babcock electrics and will be ready to deliver some of the orders as well as to inaugurate the campaign looking to the further education of Bostonians to the uses and value of the electric pleasure car. The Babcock Electric is one of the largest on the market today, comprising some seven different models.

PLAN BIG RACE IN THE MIDDLE WEST

Even if it appears likely that there will be no contest this year for the Vobe cup, which was won over the Crown Point circuit in Indiana last June by Louis Chevrolet with a Buick, the indications are still good that the middle West will have a big road race. Several of the prominent residents of Elgin, Ill., have been discussing plans with officials of the Chicago Motor Club for the promotion of a road race on a [illegible] course to connect with Elgin.

President David Beecroft, Secretary Harry T. Clinton, Director C. C. Sinsabaugh and Charles P. Root, chairman of the contest board of the Chicago Motor Club, have made a number of trips to Elgin to inspect the proposed circuit and to discuss plans for the race with Elgin citizens. The Chicago men liked the course offered and informed the Elgin men that their organization would conduct the race, probably in August as early in September. They told the Elgin enthusiasts that they would have to raise a fund of about $15,000.

The members of the committee to finance the race are succeeding well in their efforts that it is now reported that they have pledges of $12,000 more than the $15,000 they stacked out to raise. The new circuit has many advantages. It is only thirty-eight miles from Chicago and is reached by railroad and trolley lines that provide particularly [illegible] service, so that great numbers of persons could be taken from Chicago to watch the race. The Chicago and Elgin men hope to make the race the national stock classes event for 1910.

BUYS HUDSON CAR; SELLS SIX HORSES

Recently a visitor in Detroit owned sixty-four electric and gasoline vehicles that passed within nine blocks. It is interesting to note that the visitor was riding in a taxicab. In this distance he saw two Lonsdelian vehicles and none were local delivery wagons. The visitor left the city, believing for truth that he is living in the "motor age."

Another evidence that the horse is being replaced, even in the West, is that many physicians who have had two and three horses to care for their large practice and cover long distances, have given them up for automobiles.

Recently Dr. H. G. Hamsberger, of Mt. Hope, Kan., purchased a Hudson car, and on the following day sold his three spans of horses which he had been using to cover his large practice and on a great, large territory.

Eager for Contest.

Twenty formal entries have been made for the around New Jersey reliability contest from New York to Atlantic City and return on May 10 and 11. The managers of the event expect that there is a possible prospect of this number being doubled before the entry list closes on May 3. The contestants in the run from this city will spend the night of Tuesday, May 10, in Atlantic City, when the contestants in the three-day tour of the Motor Club of Harrisburg will also be in the shore city.

HARTFORD TIRES ON HUGE TRUCK

What is believed to be one of the largest, if not the largest motor truck ever built in the United States, is in regular use in Hartford, Conn., in the service of the Hartford Rubber Company.

The truck, which was especially built for the Hartford concern, is [illegible] feet wide at its [illegible] a wheel base of 14 feet and weighs close to five tons. It has a gasoline motor of 60 horse power.

One of the features of the truck is its equipment with Hartford solid motor tires [illegible] is [illegible] set on the front wheels and dual [illegible] twin tires on the rear wheels. When loaded to capacity the truck carries nearly eight large wooden cases, each of which contains fifteen automobile tires or fifty bicycle tires. Since it has been in use the truck has made an average weekly mileage of 112 miles and carried approximately [illegible] tons of freight per day. The officers of the Hartford company are quite well pleased with the truck as it is in the cost of handling freight which has been evident since the truck has been in use.

Device Traps Autoists.

The police officials of Orange, N. J., received so many complaints that automobiles were exceeding the speed limits [illegible] to build a spy hunter to do the work used by one of the bicycle police. Some good [illegible] and him out with instructions to arrest any driver whose car exceeded twelve miles an hour. The first victim was gathered in on Thursday, when Roswell Colgate was fined $25. The officer declared the speedometer showed that Mr. Colgate's car had averaged about twenty-two miles an hour.

"BLUFFING THE PUBLIC"

The Amusing Tricks of the Selden Bogie Man

An amusing little game is being carried on in automobile circles.

A certain set of gentlemen, engaged in the manufacture of automobiles, having secured a "bogie" affair, called the "Selden Patent," are trying to force other manufacturers of automobiles outside of their select and anointed circle, to get off the earth, and leave the entire field of motor car manufacture to themselves.

Failing in this they are trying to frighten the purchasers of independent cars, with this fire-breathing spook, into turning their backs on the car they honestly believe is the best for their money, and select instead one that bears the divine blessing of these self-appointed saviors of the automobile-buying public.

A Seven Year Joke

And the most amusing part of the whole game is the fact that they have been springing their spook on the public for over seven years, breathing fire and threatening dire things, and up to the present writing they have not so much as secured a decree in the courts establishing the validity of their so-called patent.

In spite of these threats the ABBOTT MOTOR COMPANY has had no difficulty in selling all the cars they could possibly build, nor have they experienced any trouble in getting materials and parts necessary for the prompt delivery of their cars.

And now this amiable spook, the joke of the automobile fraternity, has bobbed up in Detroit, where tens of thousands of first-class cars were built before any of the capable automobile engineers that have made Detroit famous all over the world, ever even heard of such a thing as the Selden Patent.

Let's tear the cover off and see what this Selden Patent amounts to—see if it contains anything that would frighten any independent manufacturer with an ordinary American backbone, or any purchaser of a car who thinks enough of his money to select the best car it will buy, in the open market, unhindered by trust methods and hindrances.

The Selden Patent has never contributed anything to the industry. It has never added one iota of value to the development of the motor car. Good cars were built before it was heard of; good cars are being built to-day without its aid.

No one ever heard of the Selden Patent until it was taken up and made the excuse for an association of automobile manufacturers who wish to use it as a means of keeping others out of this promising industry and of holding the field to themselves exclusively.

Advancing (?) the Industry

The "Sacred Seventy-Two" tell the public that their association is for the purpose of advancing the industry, but up to date the only advancement they have made that is at all conspicuous is the advancement of prices, combined with the arbitrary restriction of the output of the factories in their association.

Their ire is particularly directed at those manufacturers of cars who are giving conspicuously good value for the price asked for their product, and in the public prints they have threatened suit against the ABBOTT MOTOR COMPANY for infringement of their so-called patent.

Do They Really Want a Decision?

Would it not be much more to the point if this licensed body of automobile manufacturers pushed to completion the suit they already have in the courts against the Ford Motor Company, whom they have most assiduously sought to smother for the last seven years.

This interesting case is fresh in the public mind, and the licensed body has made much over an opinion rendered by Judge Hough, of a lower court, September 15 1909. They have not, however, secured a decree, nor do they seem in any way anxious to do so, as the opinion of Judge Hough clearly indicates that he expects the higher courts to pass on a number of disputed points before a final decision can be reached.

The ABBOTT MOTOR COMPANY has so far sought to maintain a strictly independent, neutral attitude, building cars of the quality and design that we know the public want, and at a price that is fair and just, and that needs no "protection" by trust methods.

Over a half million dollars have been invested in our factory and equipment. We have built 1,000 cars this spring, and so hearty has been the reception accorded our product that we have arranged to build over 5,000 cars during the coming year, valued at over $7,500,000

A Blow at the Industry

This is the kind of business that these unctuous defenders of the industry wish to strike down, and if their claims were not so laughable and their pretensions so ridiculous, it would be grave indeed.

As we have stated in our past advertisements, the men in charge of the important executive departments of our factory are all men of recognized standing in the industry, and have been for the past twelve years prominently identified with the country's most successful cars, both licensed and unlicensed. Surely these men have done as much for the advancement of the industry as this patent, which, for the lack of a better excuse, forms the rallying point of those manufacturers who are parceling out privileges to manufacture cars at advanced prices.

Don't Be Frightened by the Bogie Man

You may expect to read advertisements of the licensed manufacturers and inspired press notices in which they continue to sue and threaten suit. But let no man who wants full value for his money feel that he will be in any way embarrassed by the purchase of the ABBOTT-DETROIT. We absolutely guarantee every purchaser of the ABBOTT-DETROIT against any molestation on account of the Selden Patent, and our guarantee is backed by a bond, issued by the National Surety Company, of New York.

For you, the automobile-buying public, there is not the slightest danger or point in the threats of the licensed manufacturers, and you need have no fear in abiding by your judgment in the selection of an ABBOTT-DETROIT car.

GLIDDEN TOUR IS TO RUN DIRECT TO OMAHA

Many Attempts Have Been Made to Switch Tour from Its Present Route.

Chairman S. M. Butler of the Contest Board of the A. A. A. has ruled Mr. Lewis, who is now on the 1st 2,000 miles between Fort Worth, Texas, and Chicago, that the Glidden Tour after leaving St. Joseph, Mo., is to be that it will run direct to Omaha.

After leaving St. Joseph the route will probably switch across the northern corner of Missouri into Nebraska. After leaving Omaha it will turn east and take in Des Moines, Iowa. Des Moines was on the original route, and the detour has been planned in order to take in Omaha and add one more day to the tour and take in two sides of a triangle instead of one.

After leaving Des Moines the cars will run to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Moline, Ill., and Rockford, Ill., and from there to Chicago and Detroit.

Nebraska is the first State to have accepted to become affiliated with the A. A. A. Other States are likely to follow in order to be formalized and it is likely that by the end of the present year every State in the Union will have either one local automobile club within its borders, or have joined the local and body.

During the past week the publicity party had preparations made for the control with them and the various Glidden tours. Starting in Cleveland on April 12 they will go to Akron, Akron, which came out of the Akron Mountains and swept across the eastern part of the country. Wherever they literally swam or took the ferry they can into another state, which came up from the Gulf of Mexico, during the past week they literally had to swim or take the ferry across the Mississippi and Arkansas for fords, as the bridges which had escaped the ravages of the storm in that district.

After leaving Memphis, Tenn., at 1:30 they found excellent roads. They reached Helena, Ark., to which point they were accompanied by a delegation of autoists who promised all the way to Memphis to meet them and to do them honor in every way.

From Helena to Little Rock they had a very long day's run. When they reached the latter city they had covered a hundred and seventy miles. Little Rock is called the Gem of Prairie.

Famous Apperson Jack Rabbit

The Best of Reasons Why it is the Fastest, Staunchest Stock Car in America

The time is near at hand in this country when the automobile buyer will refuse to accept an assembled car—and for good and sufficient reasons.

An assembled car is not a desirable car. This must be so apparent upon even the slightest consideration that it is little short of amazing that it has taken so long for the public to get the proper view point.

There is no mechanical transportation problem known to man which demands more harmonious treatment—more perfect balance of parts—more absolute interdependability.

The Apperson is the speediest stock car in America because it is Apperson through and through.

You can't get away from this question of speed, whatever may be your own likes and dislikes in the matter, because it's the supreme test of a thoroughbred car.

With the Apperson you need not go fast, but you can go fast when you wish.

The Apperson Brothers have never been assemblers. Since they produced the first of American-made Automobiles, seventeen years ago, they have built all Apperson cars.

This is why the famous Jack Rabbit is capable of the amazing speed of 75 miles per hour. Why its normal—safe—speed excels that of other cars.

Fifty superb, unbeaten Apperson models have preceded this season's nine cars. They represent all the progress which has been made by the automobile in America.

You will want to know more about these cars, whose prices range from $2,000 to $4,250—a car for every purpose. Ask for a demonstration today.

BEST STORIES TOLD IN BOSTON LAST WEEK

In Boston.

By Attorney Patrick D. Walsh of St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Literary Society of Roxbury.

Did you ever see such a funny city as Boston? I got in from New York the other day, and as I emerged from the South Station it almost seemed like home as I heard the elevated trains rumbling along over my head. Having plenty of time on my hands, I decided to take a stroll through the crooked streets that I had heard were once the cowpaths along which the early settlers drove their cattle to and from pasture on the Common, and I soon had left the South Station far behind me. As I rambled on I saw here a sign reading, "Elevated Trains North," and here another "Elevated Trains South," and next "Elevated Trains North and South" but never a glimpse or a sound of one running toward any point of the compass. At last I discovered that opposite each of these signs there led a passageway downstairs, and I soon learned by inquiring of an astute official that one must go downward instead of upward as in other cities, in order to reach the elevated trains in Boston. Boston is, indeed, a funny city. When it is finally is revised there will not only have to be a new business definition given to the word "elevated."

Landed on Him.

By City Messenger Edward J. Leary.

My old friend, John L. Sullivan, was one of the interested spectators at the recent inauguration of Mayor Fitzgerald.

I hadn't seen the old gladiator for many years, and in the rush at the ceremonies I did not note his face until as I was passing down the aisle I heard him call. I walked over to him with the [illegible] hand. "For heaven's sake Leary, are you still carrying mail?" he said. "You've been playing that part long enough to have a place in the front row."

No Comeback.

By Ex-Mayor Hibbard, who is a practical Tailor.

A friend of mine, [illegible] came to me with a suit I had made for him and declared that it did not fit him. Of course, we had to take it back.

A short while later I encountered the doctor at the funeral of one of his patients and saw a chance to get even.

"Well, doctor, you are certainly a fortunate man," I said to him.

"Fortunate? Why?"

"Because you never have any of your poor work returned on your hands."

Woman's Way.

By the Suffrage Editor.

CHARLES R. SAUNDERS doesn't think much of woman suffrage. He discovered a new argument the other day. "Why, a suffragette would never be a candidate for President because all Presidential candidates have to admit they are over thirty-five years old."

"That's all right," replied a lady who leaned to suffrage. "When women get the ballot they will have the age requirement abolished."

No Alien!

By Jeremiah J. Hurley, Deputy Commissioner of Immigration for the Port of Boston.

ON the Cunarder Ivernia recently one of our inspectors held an Irish immigrant, whom I shall call Daniel McGillicuddy, who was going to a sister in a New York up-state city. Daniel did not have money enough to take him to his sister, and he was held pending the arrival of sufficient funds to allow him to go on. He was brought to the detention station on Long wharf with a lot of Poles, Hebrews, Slovaks, Ruthenians, Bulgarians and the Lord knows what else, much to his disgust.

Now Daniel was a regular Irish giant. Like Phaudrig Crohore.

"His arm was as round as another man's thigh.

An' he stood six foot eight.

When dinner time arrived a thoroughly frightened watchman came running into my office saying that there was a crazy Irishman in the pen who refused to go in to dinner and who swore he would wreck the place if he wasn't let alone.

I went out and found the big fellow sulking alone in a corner. Summoning up my gruffest voice and manner, I said to him:

"What's the matter with you? Why don't you go out and eat your dinner?"

"D'ye think I'm a fule," he said, "to be atin' wid all them damned furriners? I will not."

And he didn't. We had to serve him his meals apart all the while he stayed with us, despite the fact that he had travelled 3,000 miles in the steerage of the Ivernia with these same "damned furriners."

His Method.

By Rev. Herbert Johnson.

I HEARD a good story at the expense of a clergyman the other day. This gentleman met a fellow townsman during a visit to New York.

"What are you doing now?" he inquired.

"Well, I have opened up a drama[illegible]

"But man alive, you never were on the stage."

"No, I admit it."

"Then how do you expect to be able to teach these people to act?"

"I followed your method. You have never been to heaven, but you are teaching people to be angels, aren't you?"

No Live Ones?

By John D. Reagan, Juvenile Probation Officer of the Roxbury District Court.

WHO says that we are sleepy or dead? One Englishman, at any rate. He came ashore the other day from a Liverpool steamer and put up at the Parker House, where they gave him a room on the School street side. It was evening when he registered and as he woke the next morning he found the bright sunshine streaming into his room. Looking out of his window across the rear of King's Chapel and seeing the ancient gravestones stretching in serried rows before him, he exclaimed, "Good heavens, can't they give me a more cheerful room than this?"

"Yes, sir, certainly, sir," as he took my story to the clerk at the desk. "Front! Show this gentleman to No. —."

"Never mind, just have my luggage shifted, and I'll go up later."

It was evening again before he reached his room, and morning before he took a look out of its window, and there was the Granary Burying Ground.

By Alderman James M. Curley.

I HEARD a good story the other day. It was a street car conductor that was shortchanging his passengers. He got a dime from an Italian and another dime from an Irishman and forgot to give them their change.

"I wanta da nick," whined the Italian.

"You got your nick! See!" said the touch conductor. And he went out on the rear platform.

The Italian sat meekly mourning for his money, but the Irishman moved [illegible] "I want my nickel quick," he demanded.

"You got your nickel and you get nothing more."

"Say," said the Irishman, "You can play that tune on a hand organ but you can't do it on a harp. Give up."

And the conductor gave up.

Indignation was everywhere about her. "My husband runs this place," she stormed. "Let me past this instant. You shall hear from this."

She went in into the big local room and the office boy following cautiously saw her stop and demand the wages of a man who was sweeping up a pile of papers on the floor.

By Felix St. Clair.

THEY told it to me about Guy Ham. Of course it might really have been a press agent stunt in its origin, but it seems to have been handed down through a period of time that makes it at least seem true. But, at that, I don't think the yarn is generally circulated. Well, here goes:

It seems Ham is an orator—rather a classy orator. While he can deal out reads repartee from the political stump, his real ambition is along Patrick Henrie and Mark Antonilines. Often when alone he improves his weight of expression and convincing eloquence by repeating some of the most famous orators of history.

Then when we're all tired and dripping, we'll stretch ourselves out on the hot sands and let the sunshine tan our cheeks and stuff our lungs full of the salt sea breezes. THE MEGAPHONE MAN IN THE SUBWAY

SCENE: The subway station under Boston Common at Park street.

TIME: Whenever you're ready

[The Megaphone Man of one of the Evening Boston newspapers has taken a party of visitors downstairs to see the sights. There are [illegible] on the platform. Megaphone Man dumps them into the car and dances. He explains.]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ladies and gentlemen, I had the chance to buy a ticket at the ticket stand and wait for the train, but I wanted to observe that most people who are going somewhere for their small change. You see here a lady with a ten-dollar bill. She is in a line jam up behind her. No, the girls in the ticket offices don't mind a bit. It helps to kill time for them. They're not offended when anybody slips over a dime or a nickel. This way, ladies and gentlemen!

POTATO MAN—Say, Mr. Megaphone Man, I'm with you. I'm a potato chopper.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ticket choppers up in Maine? Well, that beats me. I thought [illegible] in Portland, Me., who were the only ones who used [illegible] cuts and [illegible] tickets.

POTATO MAN—Potato choppers, I said. Ticket chopper? Never heard of it. The choppers we have are wood choppers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Why, sir! No wonder Mr. Dooley's [illegible] tickets. Watch him for a few moments. [illegible] almost possible that you have seen him before.

POTATO MAN—Maybe I have. I'm [illegible] ten. I put up at the Tremont House, across from Parker's.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I guess likely you may have met Dyer, he's been in the street railway service ever since the days of the old Metropolitan. I remember, when I was a tike, riding with him [illegible] ter square to Essex street. He sure is [illegible] Dyer.

[illegible] megaphone unobserved [illegible] old days. This car for Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and Tremont street. This car for Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and Tremont street.

YOUNG PERSON (from Wyoming)—That must be another megaphone [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yep, that's [illegible] Sawyer.

YOUNG PERSON—Do you know [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, Miss, I really don't know everybody in Boston, but Robert Sawyer was lately promoted to our profession from a Roxbury Crossing-North Station car, and I happen to have frequent use of that gum. He hasn't got very far in the profession as yet, for all he has to do [illegible] the arrival of surface cars over [illegible] is the right-hand side and tell where they're going to. Notice [illegible] he makes each announcement. A very promising young [illegible]

LARGE PARTY (from Essex, Mass.)—Must I [illegible] of questions asked here in a day.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Harvey White told me the other day they handle about 100,000 passengers here every day in the year. About 30,000 of them are women. [illegible] I suppose 270,000 questions a week would be a fair average.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN (spectacled, from Newburyport)—You mean three questions to a woman. I suppose [illegible] never have to ask.

MEGAPHONE MAN—On the contrary, ma'am, listen for just a moment. Here comes one of the starters in front of [illegible] I recall his name.

[Lady approaches the starter with an infant in arms, a three-year-old boy at [illegible] and a five-year-old girls trailing.]

YOUNG MOTHER—Will this car take us to Somerville?

THE STARTER—No, lady; this car goes to Huron avenue, Cambridge. A Union square car is due at :37.

YOUNG MOTHER—Thank you. Esther! Esther! Stay close to mamma.

[Another young woman approaches the starter.]

THE STARTER—What part of Brookline?

YOUNG WOMAN (doubtfully)—I know it is a few blocks from Umumum square.

THE STARTER—Take this car to Oak square.

STOUTISH LADY (moving along in the line)—Here, I want you to help me hub! I've been around in the stores all day getting things for Marthy's young ones and I forgot to get this ribbon matched. Could you tell me the nearest place I can get it? Digs into the reticule for the ribbon problem while a football rush of other question-poppers looms up on all sides.]

OLD GENTLEMAN—Harry said he'd meet me at some corner in Cambridge and I forgot—

GENTLEMAN WITH THE BURNSIDES—How do I get to the Boston & Maine station?

ONE OF THREE GIRLS—How far are we from Raymond Hinesick?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That depends on how it goes all day.

MAN FROM BANGOR—From what I've been reading about you in the Sunday American, I made sure I that you know most of the people in the public eye. Is this a good place to [illegible] them?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Best [illegible] world. Here, for instance, is [illegible] McCarthy, lately picked by Mayor Fitzgerald to be Boston's Fire Commissioner. That's him, the tall gentleman in the gray tweed.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—Say [illegible] pay!

TELEPHONE GIRL (from Springfield)—Certainly a good looking [illegible] just the right height.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I don't know, but I'll wager something dirty. His way to the Somerset to see his old friend Josh Holden is doing. A there is one of New England's celebrated owls!

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—Mercy! An owl in the subway! Are you sure it isn't a bat?

HENRY SAWYER

MEGAPHONE MAN—Somewhat [illegible] Sawyer Sonnell is no bat, ma'am, but a fighting Owl.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—You don't mean Roger of the Skellig Mor?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The same, then. That's him, opposite you out there with the cane and the silk hat. Other Irishmen in Boston wear silk hats. Other Irishmen carry canes, but the Colonel is the only bye among us that carries both, at all seasons of the year.

[The roar of cars drowns even the Megaphone Man for a moment or two, so that the visitors to Boston hear only little scraps of conversation like this:]

FIRST YOUNG WOMAN—And her going-away dress is made of green. Can you imagine it?

SECOND YOUNG WOMAN—Married in May and going away in green. Well, I call that flying in the face of Fate. Why don't you tell her?

FIRST YOUNG WOMAN—The dress is made, my dear.

SECOND YOUNG WOMAN—Well, I'd tell him, then. It's perfectly awful!

FIRST OLD GENTLEMAN (making the first play at a chance acquaintance while waiting for his car)—Well, President Roosevelt, I see, had a quiet Sunday.

SECOND OLD GENTLEMAN (who doesn't believe in chance acquaintances or much of anything else to speak of) I wish he'd give us one. I waded through six columns of him yesterday and there wasn't one new idea in it.

FIRST OLD GENTLEMAN—I believe in large families myself.

SECOND OLD GENTLEMAN—You do, do you? Well, I don't. I've got eleven apartment houses out in Dorchester, and my pet tenant is an old maid with a Thomas cat in poor health.

[The roar dies away for a moment.]

PRETTY GIRL—There's a car that says "Cross Town. Where can that be? I'd hate to live in a cross town.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Here, if you care to see a gentleman in the public eye, comes the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson!

PRETTY GIRL—Oh, I do want to see him. Which is he?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The dapper-looking gentleman in the check suit.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—Gee, I took him for William Gillette, the actor.

MEGAPHONE MAN—They are not unlike, in general get-up.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—On the level, I think Johnson has got it on Gillette as an actor. Take this bar and bottle bill of all the

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—One of the most meritorious bills ever proposed in a Legislature in these United States. Are you aware, sir, that statistics show that—

MEGAPHONE MAN (firmly)—While I'm not hep to what this is all about it listens like a political dispute, and they are absolutely prohibited. Here comes Winthrop Ames, whom Boston knows as capitalist, but whom New York affected to receive as a High Brow and Uplifter when he came along with his New Theatre proposition. Well, well, it's quite an afternoon! Yonder is Mr. Robert Luce of Somerville, sometimes referred to as the Father of Direct Nominations in Massachusetts.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—They say the kid-lent doing any too well. Truant Officer Joe Walker is after him.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—I positively cannot see Robert Luce.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Right then, madam; smooth-shaven, eyeglasses, look of determination, bag containing the papers.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—I can look at him, young man, but I refuse to see him. Of all the unfair and unjallant attacks on the woman suffrage amendments I ever heard, the bitterest came from this Luce person a few years ago at the State House. I had all I could do to restrain—

MEGAPHONE MAN (hurriedly)—Speaking of State Houses and such, we have with us to-day—the distinguished looking party buying a magazine there—Mr. Roswell B. Burchard of Little Compton, R. I., spoken of just now as a possible successor to Senator Aldrich. We see Speaker Burchard up here so much that Boston would regard it as extremely fitting that one as well known in the Back Bay as in Providence should be handed the Aldrich bone.

LARGE PARTY (from Essex)—Give him Lodge's!

YOUNG PERSON (quite enthusiastically)—Oh, bother take your politicians! There's a gentleman whom I'm sure is somebody.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Meaning?

YOUNG PERSON (in almost a whisper)—He'll hear us.

MEGAPHONE MAN (dropping his voice, too)—Well, I should say so. M. Constant Desire Desprad'elle?

YOUNG PERSON—I think you're funning me; it sounds too much like a novel.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Hope to die if it isn't M. Desprad'elle, and I should say he is somebody. If he isn't anybody as an architect, which he certainly is, and if he isn't anybody in Dutch professor of architectural design at Technology—which is travelling perpendicular—let me tell you M. Desprad'elle is a corresponding member of the Academie Des Beaux Arts. Now!

YOUNG PERSON—O-o! And he uses the subway!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Everybody uses the subways.

HOTEL CLERK (from Rutland, Vt.)—Well, I'll be

[Megaphone Man coughs.]

HOTEL CLERK—Pardon m.

MEGAPHONE MAN—What was it?

HOTEL CLERK—I've been sticking with this outfit all day and here's the first time I see a familiar face.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Who's got it on?

HOTEL MAN—Ain't that Felix McGittrick?

MEGAPHONE MAN—None other. Used to be an assistant district attorney under John B., and at present is waiting to see what the State Civil Service Commission will say about Fitzgerald's nomination of Felix to be a member of the Board of Assessors.

HOTEL CLERK—Well, sir, our Green Mountain boys do get along. I want to go over and talk with him. Guess I'll have to leave you here, so long!

MEGAPHONE MAN—So long, Jack! Well, if everybody has seen enough of this station and its crowds, which get larger all the time from now until 5:30, we can ride to Boylston street from here and I'll have the chauffeur pick us up at the Touraine. Any car will do for us. Let's take this one. All aboard!

FUNNY STORIES THE POLICEMEN TELL

MAN HIGH UP.

By Patrolman James Bray of Station No. 1, Hanover street, North End.

WHEN I was railroading for the Boston Elevated some years ago I ran a car from Grove Hall to Sprague, Somerville. One night a well-dressed individual, much the worse from liquor, got on my car at the Dudley street station and became very obnoxious. He rode all the way to Somerville and back again. When the car reached Dudley street on its way to Grove Hall the man, somewhat sobered after the trip, tried to vent his spleen on me. He and a bartender who was on the car got into a scuffle and rolled into a deep snow bank. On the return trip I saw both of them together in a nearby saloon. Days afterward I met the bartender and he told me that the man was a member of the Common Council. He was a prominent member of a Democratic branch. If his enemies in politics only had this ammunition around election time his career would be cut short as a servant of the people.

POLICE WANTED.

By Lieutenant Oscar Peare of the Dorchester Station.

LAST Winter, after one of the heavy snow storms, when I was in charge of the station on the captain's day off, a lady telephoned in to inform me that an officer had called at her house and requested her to have her sidewalk shovelled off. She said that the man that owned the house lived in New York, and that her husband, who was a travelling man, was not at home and would not be home for some time, and she did not know how she could have the walk shovelled, and thought she would call up the station so that she would not be summoned into court. The officer told her she would have a man to do the job, and received this reply: "Please send up an officer to do the job, as I know he will do it right, and I will pay him for his trouble."

BOOSTED BANKS.

By Bernard Doherty, the humorist of station 11.

TWO men employed in cleaning a large vacant tract of land on Dorchester on a warm day recently, left their coats on a back fence near at hand. Some boys were close by watching the large rubbish fire the men had built to consume the old papers, etc. When the cleaners had their backs turned the boys threw the coats on the fire. As the 12 o'clock whistle blew the men started for their home for dinner. They found smart boys had [illegible] their clothing. The men [illegible] ringer on the [illegible] of the boys. ONE ON HIM.

By Patrolman Walter H. Underhill, Co. Dedham Street Station.

I [illegible] Beach boulevard late one night, with [illegible] automobile came along and the driver asked me if I didn't want a ride up town. I accepted the invitation, and on the way he began to talk about the policemen who had charge of the automobile work in Boston.

"They're all good fellows except one," said the driver.

We rode a few hundred yards in silence, when he finally turned to me and said: "By the way, what's your name?"

I replied that my name was Underhill.

"Are you on the Boston police force?" he asked.

I replied that I was. The car stopped in its tracks.

"Get out and walk," he yelled. "You're the fellow I meant when I said there was one of the Boston force who wasn't a good fellow."

LAUDER THRIFT.

By Inspector Thomas Lynch, Police Headquarters.

THE best story I've heard in some time is one that a New York inspector told me about Harry Lauder, omy. the Scotch comedian. Harry, according to the story, was coming across the pond one night he happened to stroll up on deck for a quiet smoke. He sat down and proceeded to fill his pipe from a well-filled pouch, when another Scotchman drew a chair up beside him. He looked longingly at Harry's tobacco pouch and finally asked Lauder for a match.

When he received the match he pulled out a battle-scarred pipe and began fishing in his pockets for tobacco. Finally, finding none, he turned to Lauder and said: "Sorry, old man, but I've forgotten my tobacco."

Instead of offering his own pouch, Lauder reached out his hand and said, "Then you won't need the match."

There is no one sharper than a Thistle when it comes to saving, and I'll bet the man who went hungry for a smoke lauded Lauder for his economy.

INVITED!

By Patrolman Michael King of Station No. 9, Dudley street, Roxbury.

A FRIEND of mine who is somewhat of a politician had a penchant for telling stories at entertainments given for the benefit of inmates of various institutions. One holiday he appeared at an affair held in a lunatic asylum and contributed to the musical program. Well, he was telling one of those Ward 17 rally stories. He had the inmates convulsed with joyous hilarity, some of whom had to be carried out. All of a sudden the scene was transformed into a tragedy by a voice in the rear of the hall. Said the voice: "You'd better stay here." That was too much for my friend. He's married now and has several children, and prefers the prattle of the latter to the plaudits of the inmates of institutions.

ANOTHER SALOME TO SHOW SOCIAL SHORT COMINGS IN "HEROD"

But Spare Your Blushes, She's the Grand-Aunt of the Light Clothed Lady Who Danced as a Head Hunter—Mrs. Fiske to Continue Another Week in "Pillars of Society" in Place of "Hannele."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WITH two weeks of hard training in the heavyweight drama behind us it is not at all surprising that the prospect of facing the weightiest of them all brings no shudder of dread, or even fear of consequences.

William Faversham and his ponderous production of Stephen Phillips "Herod" at the Shubert to-morrow evening will find no flinching audience on the warm side of the footlights.

We are fairly bristling with courage and are eager to meet Mr. Faversham and his poetic drama on even terms.

And with Faversham's "Herod" you will get Salome—a new Salome, the grand-aunt of the young lady in vaudeville who flirted coyly with John the Baptist and then danced his head from his shoulders to a silver plate.

The Salome of "Herod" has social shortcomings of her own, however, that will prove amply diverting, though not as spectacular, as those of her undraped and wiggling namesake.

As a matter of cold historical fact there were many Salomes during the Herodian era, and most of them were picturesque. When it was first stated that there was a Salome in "Herod," many well meaning persons with an eye to things pure, showed signs of unrest and expressed the fear that the whole affair of the unconventional, bloodthirsty dancer was again to appear in some new form of classic nausea. Fresh tears were shed for John the Baptist, but they were wasted.

Perhaps it is just as well to put Salome in her proper genealogical place while she is under fire. The first one we come across was the queen of Judea, reigning from 76 to 69 B. C. She was in no way related to the Herod dynasty, yet it appears that the name was a popular one at the time in Herod's family, for not less than six are found.

THE SALOME FAMILY TREE.

The first of the six was Herod's aunt, and the next his sister. The latter is the Salome we shall see at the Shubert to-morrow evening. She was a character to be shunned by people moving in good society, for she had several husbands, to none of whom was she faithful. She was jealous of Herod's wife, Mariamne, a princess of royal blood, and she entered into an intrigue to disgrace her, in which she was amply successful.

Elpias was the seventh wife of Herod, who, it appears had strong matrimonial inclinations, and their daughter was named Salome. She does not appear in the play nor does she figure in history, so it must be assumed that she behaved herself properly, for otherwise some ambitious playwright would have seized her long ago. Herod's son, Philip, has several children, one of whom was named Salome.

The next Salome was the grand-daughter of Herod's second wife, Herodias, and this was the one who put bells on her toes and two-stepped John the Baptist's head into the basket. The last of the name in the Herodian dynasty was the great-grand-daughter of Aristobulus, of whom nothing unladylike is said.

Stephen Phillips, the author of "Herod," has been singularly successful in keeping out of the public eye, and among playgoers but little is known of him, although his "Herod," when first produced in London in June, by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, aroused a great deal of attention.

Mr. Phillips is a descendant, on his mother's side, of the poet Wordsworth. His interest in the drama dates from his college days at Cambridge, when he attended a performance of Benson's troupe of Shakespearians. Shakespeare hit him so hard that he determined to become an actor and, forsaking college, he joined the Benson players, remaining with the organization for six years. It is related that when Phillips impersonated the Ghost in "Hamlet" his "dignity was so awful" that he was compelled to take curtain calls, the first and only instances on record where an actor playing that part has been so honored.

It was in 1892 that Phillips was seized with a desire to restore blank verse to its old dignity, and he began by writing a poem called "Christ in Hades," an effort that acclaimed him a genius at the very beginning of his career as a writer.

REGRETS FOR NEW THEATRE COMPANY.

With the New Theatre company and its heart-breaking pay-roll on its way to new fields about the only regret one can feel over its visit to Boston is the dismal fact that playgoers here did not take it at its face value and exhibit keener interest in the performances that will stand as the most artistic and beautiful of the season. The culture of Boston that is talked about so much abroad and that we think we feel when we read about it in the newspapers, made a sorry spectacle of itself during the fortnight that the New Theatre company was holding out its right hand.

There is a lingering suspicion that culture was busy paying tribute to "Follies of 1909" and other kindred classics, when it ought to have been enriching itself with the beauty found in the performances of the New Theatre company.

It is not out of reason to predict that on its next visit the New Theatre company will be more favorably received, and that our proud and much heralded culture will be found as advertised.

Local culture needs a prodding.

Mrs. Fiske has exercised woman's prerogative of changing her mind. It had been announced from New York that during the second week of her stay at the Hollis she would pass from Ibsen to Hauptmann—from the satirical "Pillars of Society" to the deep seated gloom of "Hannele." But you will have to forego "Hannele's" chill and be content with "Pillars of Society," for Mrs. Fiske will cling to Ibsen. Of all of our distinguished players none have displayed more real courage than Mrs. Fiske.

MRS. FISKE NEVER FALTERS.

With sublime disregard of box-office consequences she has never faltered when brought face to face with dramatic dangers. She has approached seemingly insurmountable obstacles and brushed them away with the simple intelligence of her art. She has given Ibsen a place on the American stage that he could have reached through no other source. It has taken courage, faith and conviction to do this, and your admiration and respect goes freely to the woman who has accomplished it.

Mrs. Fiske gave a splendid example of womanly courage in "Hannele" when she played the role of a child—a role that needed skill as well as courage. According to reports from New York Mrs. Fiske found another artistic triumph in "Hannele"—those terrible critics have said so—and had Boston been favored with it there would have been no signs of terror at its coming.

One of the most noticeable traits in Mrs. Fiske's character is her unwillingness to subordinate others in the rebuilding of her own roles. She has an eye for general results rather than personal success, an idea that is dominant in "Pillars of Society," where she makes a minor role strong and commanding by the power of her art alone, and not by destroying the natural strength of the other characters. Mrs. Fiske never cheats—she plays a square game with both the public and her associates.

The other changes in the week's bills at the theatres include the coming of Julian Eltinge to the American Music Hall, where he is expected toship as a perfect lady in some new Parisian creations that will excite envy in the heart of every woman who sees him. Mr. Eltinge will not bring back old "goods," we are told, but will offer a few novelties that are both new and astonishing.

Mary Norman, an entertainer with both reputation and ability, will make her appearance at Keith's theatre.

John Craig and his players will forsake romance to-morrow and devote themselves to the rural life of "The County Fair." This play made a fortune for Neil Burgess during the twenty years or more that he used it. Its appearance in stock has been made possible only by the death of Mr. Burgess.

"How I Would Make the Kiddies Happy If I Were Very Rich."

COME, kiddies, don't look so sad. Let's forget the fact that we have to stay in the city. Let's pretend that we're at the seashore and have a every blessed one of you! Here are the tickets, the lunch baskets are packed and I've brought your new bathing suits. You can paddle and splash around in the water to your heart's content. Then when we're all tired and dripping, we'll stretch ourselves out on the hot sands and let the sunshine tan our cheeks and stuff our lungs full of the salt sea breezes. Oh, yes, kiddies, the parched pavements of the stifling city will be very far away when my dreams turn to dollars and I'm rich enough to make you happy.

THE MEGAPHONE MAN IN THE SUBWAY

SCENE: The subway station under Boston Common at Park street

TIME: Whenever you're ready

[The Megaphone Man of the Subway Service Bureau, Boston, seeing Boston seasons has taken a party of visitors downstairs to see the sights. There are fourteen in the party. The Megaphone Man dumps them in charge of a guard on the starting of one of the trains and advises. He explains.]

MEGAPHONE MAN—It just happens I had the change ready. If you'll stand and wait for a few minutes you'll observe that most people like to come here for their small change. Yes, here's a lady with a ten-dollar bill. See the line jam up behind her. No, the girls in the ticket offices don't mind a bit. It helps to kill time for them. They're offended when anybody slips over a nickel. This way, ladies and gentlemen!

POTATO MAN (from Fort Fairfield, Me.)—By jinks, I think I know the party in charge of that grass boy. I'll bet he dumped the tickets into MEGAPHONE MAN—You mean the chopper?

POTATO MAN—Well, he was a chopper, but he don't look like the kind we have up in Maine.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ticket choppers up in Maine? Well, that beats me. So they've got an [illegible] in Portland, eh? Well, she's a busy city, and I'm almost sorry to leave it.

POTATO MAN—Just [illegible] Ticket chopper? No, I mean the choppers as [illegible] pers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Oh! Nippers! Now I get you. You mean the men who punch the tickets as you go through the gates. Yes, we have a few of them, but they're not so busy as the ticket choppers. It's almost impossible that you have seen him before.

POTATO MAN—Mistaken identity, perhaps. The last time I came to Boston I saw a man at the Tremont House, across the Parkers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I guess likely you may have met Dyer, he's been in the street railway service ever since the days of the old Metropolitan. I remember [illegible] ride, riding there! Esther! Stay close to mamma, dear.

[Megaphone Man obtains megaphone unobserved and says:] This is for Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and Tremont street. This car for Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and Tremont street!

YOUNG PERSON (from Winooski, Vt.)—That must be another megaphone man.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yep, that's Henry Sawyer.

YOUNG PERSON—Do you know him?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, Miss, I really don't know everybody in Boston, but brother Sawyer was lately promoted to our profession from a Roxbury Crossing-North Station car, and I happen to have frequent use of that gun. He hasn't got very far in the profession as yet, for all he has to do [illegible] cars over there on the right-hand side and tell where they're going to. No [illegible] how distinctly he makes each announcement. A very promising young [illegible].

LARGE PARTY (from Essex, Mass.)—Must be a lot of questions asked here in a day.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Harvey Whitford told me the other day they handle about 100,000 passengers here every day in the year. About 90,000 of them are women. Um, I suppose 75,000 questions a day would be a fair average.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN (spectacled, from Newburyport)—You mean three questions to a woman. I suppose [illegible].

MEGAPHONE MAN—On the contrary [illegible]. Here's one of the starters in front of us. I [illegible].

[Lady approaches the starter with an air in arms, a three-year-old boy at her skirts and a five-year-old girlie trailing along.]

YOUNG MOTHER—Will this car take us to Somerville?

THE STARTER—No, lady; this car goes to Huron avenue, Cambridge. A Union square car is due at 37.

YOUNG MOTHER—Thank you. Esther! Stay close to mamma. Mercy! An owl in the subway! Are you sure it isn't a bat?

HENRY SAWYER

MEGAPHONE MAN (somewhat [illegible] owl is no bat, ma'am, but a fighting Owl.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—You don't mean Roger of the Skellig Mor?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The same, then. That's him, opposite you out there, with the cane and the silk hat. Other Irishmen in Boston wear silk hats. Other Irishmen carry canes, but the Colonel is the only bye among us that carries both, at all seasons of the year.

[The roar of cars drowns even the Megaphone Man for a moment or two, so that the visitors to Boston hear only little scraps of conversation like this:]

FIRST YOUNG WOMAN—And her going-away dress is made of green. Can you imagine it?

SECOND YOUNG WOMAN—Married in May and going away in green. Well, I call that flying in the face of Fate. Why don't you tell her?

FIRST YOUNG WOMAN—The dress is made, my dear.

SECOND YOUNG WOMAN—Well, I'd tell him, then. It's perfectly awful!

FIRST OLD GENTLEMAN (making the first play at a chance acquaintance while waiting for his car)—Well, President Roosevelt, I see, had a quiet Sunday.

SECOND OLD GENTLEMAN (who doesn't believe in chance acquaintances or much of anything else to speak of)—I wish he'd give us one. I waded through six columns of him yesterday and there wasn't one new idea in it.

FIRST OLD GENTLEMAN—I believe in large families myself.

SECOND OLD GENTLEMAN—You do, do you? Well, I don't. I've got eleven apartment houses out in Dorchester, and my pet tenant is an old maid with a Thomas cat in poor health.

[The roar dies away for a moment.]

PRETTY GIRL—There's a car that says "Cross" Town. Where can that be? I'd hate to live in a cross town.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Here, if you care to see a gentleman in the public eye, comes the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson!

PRETTY GIRL—Oh, I do want to see him. Which is he?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The dapper-looking gentleman in the check suit.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—Gee, I took him for William Gillette, the actor.

MEGAPHONE MAN—They are not unlike, in general get-up.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—On the level, I think Johnson has got it on Gillette as an actor. Take this bar and bottle bill. Of all the——

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—One of the most meritorious bills ever proposed in a Legislature in these United States. Are you aware, sir, that statistics show that——

MEGAPHONE MAN (firmly)—While I'm not hep to what this is all about, it listens like a political dispute, and they are ah-so-lute-ly prohibited. Here comes Winthrop Ames, whom Boston knows as capitalist, but whom New York affected to receive as a High Brow and Uplifter when he came along with his New Theatre proposition. Well, well, it's quite an afternoon! Yonder is Mr. Robert Lace of Somerville, sometimes referred to as the Father of Direct Nominations in Massachusetts.

FALL RIVER ALDERMAN—They say the kid isn't doing any too well, Truant Officer Jim Walker is after him.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—I positively cannot see Robert Lace.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Right there, madam; smooth shaven, eyeglasses, look of determination, beg containing the papers.

LADY WITH THE FIRM CHIN—I can look at him, young man, but I refuse to see him. Of all the unfair and ungallant attacks on the woman suffrage amendments I ever heard, the bitterest came from this Lace person. Eleven apartment houses out in Dorchester, and my pet tenant is an old maid with a Thomas cat in poor health.

MEGAPHONE MAN (hurriedly)—Speaking of State Houses and such, we have with us to-day the distinguished looking party buying a magazine there, Mr. Roswell B. Burchard of Little Compton, R. I., spoken of just now as a possible successor to Senator Aldrich. We see Speaker Burchard up here so much that Boston would regard it as extremely fitting that one as well known in the Back Bay as in Providence should be handed the Aldrich bag.

LARGE PARTY (from Essex)—Give him Ledge's!

YOUNG PERSON (quite enthusiastically)—Oh, bother take your politicians! There's a gentleman whom I'm sure is somebody.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Meaning?

YOUNG PERSON (in almost a whisper)—He'll hear you.

MEGAPHONE MAN (dropping his voice, too)—Well, I should say so. M. Constant Desire Despradelle!

YOUNG PERSON—I think you're funning me; it sounds too much like a novel.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Hope to die if it isn't M. Despradelle, and I should say he is somebody. If he isn't anybody as an architect, which he certainly is, and if he isn't anybody as Rotch professor of architectural design at Technology—which is travelling perceptibly—let me tell you M. Despradelle is a corresponding member of the Academie Des Beaux Arts. Now!

YOUNG PERSON—O-o! And he uses the subway!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Everybody uses the subway.

[Megaphone Man coughs.]

HOTEL CLERK—Pardon me.

MEGAPHONE MAN—What was it?

HOTEL CLERK—I've been sticking with this outfit all day and here's the first time I see a familiar face.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Who's got it on?

HOTEL MAN—Ain't that Felix McGetrick?

MEGAPHONE MAN—None other. Used to be an assistant district attorney under John B., and at present is waiting to see what the State Civil Service Commission will say about Fitzgerald's nomination of Felix to be a member of the board of Assessors.

HOTEL CLERK—Well, sir, our Green Mountain boys do get along. I want to go over and talk with him. Guess I'll have to leave you here. So long!

MEGAPHONE MAN—So long, Jack! Well, if everybody has seen enough of this station and its crowds, which get larger all the time from now until 5:30, we can ride to Boylston street from here and I'll have the chauffeur pick us up at the Touraine. Any car will do for us. Let's take this one. All aboard!

FUNNY STORIES THE POLICEMEN TELL

By Patrolman James Bray of Station No. 1, Hanover street, North End.

WHEN I was railroading for the Boston Elevated some years ago I ran a car from Grove Hall to Spring Hill, Somerville. One night a well-dressed individual, much the worse from liquor, got on my car at the Dudley street station and became very obnoxious. He rode all the way to Somerville and back again. When he reached Dudley street on his way to Grove Hall the man, somewhat sobered after the trip, tried to vent his spleen on me. He and a bartender who was on the car got into a scuffle and rolled into a deep snow bank. On return trip I saw both of them together in a nearby saloon. Days afterward I met the bartender and he told me that the man was a member of the Common Council. He is now a prominent member of a legislative branch. If his enemies in politics only had this ammunition and could show that his career would be cut short as a servant of the people.

POLICE WANTED.

By Lieutenant Oscar Peare of the Dorchester Station.

LAST Winter, after one of the heavy storms when I was in charge of the station on the captain's day off, a lady telephoned in to inform me that an officer had called at her house and requested her to have her sidewalk shovelled off. She said that the man that owned the house lived in New York, and that her husband, who was a travelling man, was not at home and would not be home for some time, and she did not know how she could have the walk shovelled, and thought she would call up the station so that it would not be summoned into court. The officer told her she would [illegible] walk was not cleaned. I told her to [illegible] a man to do the job, and received this reply: "Please send up an officer to do the job, as I know he will do it right, and I will pay him for his trouble."

BOOSTED BANKS.

By Barnard Dohan, the humorist of Station 11.

TWO men employed in cleaning up a large vacant tract of land in Dorchester on a warm day recently, left their coats on a back fence close at hand. Some boys were close by watching the large rubbish fire the men had built to consume the old papers, etc. When the cleaners had their backs turned the boys threw the coats on the fire. As the 12 o'clock whistle blew the men started for their [illegible] to go home for dinner. They [illegible] about the policemen who had charge of the automobile work in Boston.

"They're all good fellows except one," said the driver.

We rode a few hundred yards in silence, when he finally turned to me and said: "By the way, what's your name?"

I replied that my name was Underhill.

"Are you on the Boston police force?" he asked.

I replied that I was. The car stopped in its tracks.

"Get out and walk," he yelled. "You're the fellow I meant when I said there was one of the Boston force who wasn't a good fellow."

LAUDER THRIFT.

By Inspector Thomas Lynch, Police Headquarters.

THE best story I've heard in some time is one that a New York inspector told me about Harry Lauder, omy. the Scotch comedian. Harry, according to the story, was coming across the pond and one night he happened to stroll up on deck for a quiet smoke. He sat down and proceeded to fill his pipe from a well-filled pouch, when another Scotchman drew a chair up beside him. He looked longingly at Harry's tobacco pouch and finally asked Lauder for a match.

When he received the match he pulled out a battle-scarred pipe and began fishing in his pockets for tobacco. Finally, finding none, he turned to Lauder and said: "Sorry, old man, but I've forgotten my tobacco."

Instead of offering his own pouch, Lauder reached out his hand and said, "Then you won't need the match."

There is no one sharper than a Thistle when it comes to saving, and the driver asked me if I didn't want a ride up town. I accepted the invitation, and on the way he began to talk smoke lauded Lauder for his econ-

INVITED!

By Patrolman Michael King of Station No. 5, Dudley street, Roxbury.

A FRIEND of mine who is somewhat of a politician had a penchant for telling stories at entertainments given for the benefit of inmates of various institutions. One holiday he appeared at an affair held in a lunatic asylum and contributed to the musical program. Well, he was telling one of those Ward 17 rally stories. He had the inmates convulsed with joyous hilarity, some of whom had to be carried out. All of a sudden the scene was transformed into a tragedy by a voice in the rear of the hall. Said the voice: "You'd better stay here." That was too much for my friend. He's married now and has several children, and prefers the prattle of the latter to the plaudits of the inmates of institutions.

FINALE OF THE SEASON IN TOWN PROVES ROUND OF EXCEPTIONAL GAYETY

Smart Set Turns Out in Force for Last Whirl Before Hieing to Mountain, Vale or Beach for the "Hot Spell"—Notables to Gather This Week for Big Matinee Benefit for the Animal Rescue League—But Few of Ultras Stay in City.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

THE past week was actually gay—strange, to be sure, for at this time of the year things social are usually at their lowest ebb although it has had some notable exceptions.

But, commencing Monday with the [illegible] carnival at the new Boston Arena for the benefit of the Sharon Sc[illegible] with the brilliant wedding at Trinity of Miss Alice S[illegible] and Herbert [illegible] final round of merrymaking.

That society was anxious and ready to be amused was evident from the attendance at the various charitable entertainments, perhaps most of all the Vanity Fair Club show given by the members in aid of the Vincent Memorial Hospital.

The only regret at seeing the events slip by one after the other comes in the thought that the end is so near, for with it [illegible] it is only natural that Summer plans should be the all-[illegible] hot the regular exodus should begin. Where to go and how long to remain [illegible] d and solved each day over the afternoon tea or at the various other pl[illegible] f amusement.

There will soon be so few of the ultras left in town that any entertaining will be out of the question and the h[illegible] resorts, where nature is preparing a glorious welcome for [illegible]

MRS. FISK TO AID ANIMALS.

Mrs. Fiske and her company will put on[illegible] last acts of "Becky Sharpe" and "Tess." Between these Miss Beatrice Herford will give some of her [illegible] and there will be selections by the Pierian Sodality of Harvard College, Chalmers Clifton, a sophomore, the leader. A large group of Vincent Club girls under the direction of Miss Evelyn Thayer will be the ushers and there will also be a grouped flower girls, young married women, in charge of Mrs. John C. Five Invaluable New Inventions
SHOWN THIS WEEK IN THE GOOD STORES OF THIS CITY

Three Great Features—"Lastikops Bandlet," "X-Uspender," and "Solid Service System"

Alert merchants realize that the quickest and surest way to build up a great corset trade is to keep their customers in close touch with Nemo Corsets.

Therefore, the best dealers everywhere have prepared for "Nemo Week" by securing full stocks of all the old Nemo favorites as well as the latest Nemo novelties, and are now ready, with us

TO PROVE—the SUPERIORITY of Nemo Corsets over all others; that each model is a DISTINCT PATENTED INVENTION, performing a definite hygienic service.

TO PROVE—that all Nemos are constructed on scientific principles, with tangible health-giving features, producing beneficial results that NO OTHER corsets can POSSIBLY give.

TO PROVE—that the Nemos are the only corsets in existence that combine the UTMOST COMFORT with absolutely correct and ultra-fashionable shape.

TO PROVE—that it is TRUE ECONOMY to buy Nemo Corsets, because they represent better value, are made of better materials, have greater durability and will wear longer than any other corsets.

Corsets for Stout Women

The fame of the Nemo "Self-Reducing" Corset is world-wide—it STANDS ALONE. This year we have fifteen different models, a perfect fit for every type of stout figure.

Self-Reducing Corset No. 522 With "Lastikops" Bandlet | $5.00

A marvelous success, and the greatest figure-reducer ever made. Worn by slender women, also. The semi-elastic "Bandlet" gives perfect support, with absolute comfort and safety. See it!

Self-Reducing Corsets $3.00, $4.00, $5, $8 and $10

All the old favorites, which still suit many women best. Medium styles, for women who dislike extremes; and the very long models which produce ultra-fashionable slenderness.

For the Slender and Medium

Many women think that all Nemos are for stout figures. We hope to dispel that idea during this Nemo Week. Our slender models have features just as valuable as our stout models. For example:

Nemo "X-Uspender" Corset—$5.00

Entirely new. Flattens the abdomen, back, hips and upper limbs; and the front steels CAN'T stick out below. It's a WONDER!

Nemo Back-Resting Corsets, $3.50
Nemo Military Belt Corsets, 3.00
Nemo Swan-Shape Corsets, 3.50
Nemo Solid-Service Corsets, 2.00

Don't miss Nemo Week! See all the new Nemos—it's not only a pleasure, but a duty which every woman owes to herself.

KOPS BROS., Manufacturers, NEW YORK

MANY EVENTS OF INTEREST AMONG WOMEN'S CLUBS OF BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

THE attention of club women everywhere is now focused on the tenth biennial which opens in Cincinnati a week from Wednesday. Delegates have been chosen to go from Boston and in a few days they will be ready for the grandest and biggest convention the great federation has ever held. The Ohio Club women are planning to outdo all previous efforts as hostesses and it is certainly going to be a fine time for delegates are assured a wonderfully profitable and enjoyable stay.

The meetings are to be held in the big Music Hall, of which Ohio women are justly proud. The club women will be in charge for the great May music festival for which the hall was built. The large auditorium has a seating capacity of 3,023 and there are two smaller ones which may be used with it. Many of the delegates will be held in the Art Museum in Eden park and in the new auditorium in Eden park and in the new auditorium. Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president general federation president at the biennial held in this city two years ago will preside side and with her will be the vice-president. Mrs. Josiah E. Cowles, Mrs. Philip Carpenter of New York has charge of the program.

The message will be the union of forty-seven State federations, the canal zone federation, national societies, city federations and individual clubs in this country, Hawaii and Alaska making eighty-seven, approximately 800 000 women.

The Somerville Daughters of Italia have chosen Mrs. Jessie R. Pratt president of the coming year to be assisted by vice-presidents, Mrs. Anna Sargent Hunt, Mrs. Eva R. McFarland and Mrs. Mary B. Plummer; recording secretary, Mrs. Adrienne A. Sears; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Bertha B. Gifford; treasurer, Mrs. Jennie C. Gilman; executive committee, Mrs. Mary G. Moody, Mrs. Fannie T. A Very Artistic Bride.

The approaching marriage of poetic Germaine Faydeau awakens recollections of drama, art, literature and love. For her father, George Faydeau, is the author of "The Girl from Maxim's," a play out of which grew such American plays as "The Girl from Rector's" and many of a like kind.

If literature and art can make a bride happy then Mlle. Faydeau should be a very happy bride indeed. Her fiance is George Kahn, is a man of letters. Her father, George Faydeau, is one of the best known of modern playwrights. Her mother, who was Mlle. Carolus Duran, is well versed in both literature and art. Her grandmother, Mme. Carolus Duran, once was Marie Pauline Croiscint, was a model. Her grandfather, Carolus-Duran, is director of the famous art school, the Ville Medici, at Rome.

French Syndicate Will Spend $5,000,000 in Heart of City.

LONDON, April 30.—A piece of Paris in the middle of London is the latest thing being in a year or so. On a bit of land facing the Strand which has been cleared of buildings, a French syndicate is about to erect a group of splendid buildings as a centre of Parisian commerce and entertainment.

The buildings will cost about $5,000,000 and will include shops, offices, a "Palace of Industries," a theatre, restaurants, a French club, banqueting hall, and other features.

At present the Gaiety Theatre and Restaurant, and an Australian Government office are the only buildings on the site.

GIRL ART STUDENTS SOLVE PROBLEM OF HIGH LIVING

Organize a Club, Will Put Up Building and Won't Have a Man in the Place.

QUARTERS IN THE FENWAY

Hanging Garden and Kitchenette for Fudge Two Features of New Home.

FORTY young women art students have solved the problem of living. They have boarding housekeepers at bay. Not only have they found the way to live well in their own apartments, but they slashed the price of living by a third.

This unique organization of women of the art clubs of Paris, or of Rome, or of Munich, are endowed and this is so in the Smart Club at No. 4 West 40th street. An up-to-date home is now under construction for them in the Fenway. They will remove to their new quarters in the Fall.

Although the club members are students of art who are generally supposed to live somewhere way up in the attics, they have unconsciously proved that woman suffrage is a practical and acceptable thing. Aside from a regular janitress, there is "not a man in the house." The girls govern themselves, run the house and make their own laws. They have neither outside interference. They have no male guests here. The janitress is married, and are self reliant bachelor girls, for the time being, at least.

The new building, designed by C. Howard Walker, has all the accommodations that the girls have been able to devise. Quite the most delightful innovation from a girl's standpoint is the little kitchenette on the parlor floor, where fudge and rarebits can be made for the men guests without all the comforts of home attendant.

The new building is to be so constructed that one setting will be a party wall to them the other. This irregularity will afford a low roof which is to be made into a garden. Two compartments are also to be built in case any of the club members take on the fad of keeping any of dogs. Four reception rooms and seven studios, each 25 feet square, are provided for the sewing, modelling for sixty pupils, practically all single rooms, with numerous baths on each floor.

The color scheme of the Art Students' Club is unusual in the Art House line, who originated it on account of the lack of materials on hand for art studies.

The room committee is composed of Jeanette Rieker, an art student, Beatrice Fowler, a student, at Tufts, Hazel Buffington, a student, Mary Van Norden studying music and art, and Ruth Hall, a nurse from Newton, who expects to give lessons to the outside world on the color scheme.

BOUND TO SEE HIS ADORED.

Routed with a Broom, Continues Siege Until Arrested.

CHICAGO, April 30.—For eleven hours broken at intervals by going up to try the front door, Vincent Lavelle every three days, Milwaukee avenue and North Ada street, sat on his sweetheart's step, seeking a chance to speak to her. He was arrested on the following day and he was fined $25 and costs by Municipal Judge Harvard in the Harrison street Court. He was arrested on the complaint of Zdenka Libanski, sixteen years old, 4,840 Centre street, whom he he told the police he loved.

Getting tired of sitting on the step when Miss Libanski failed to appear, he made several attempts to gain entrance to the home, but was beaten back with a broom by her mother, Mrs. Mary Libanski. Finally she called the Stock Yard police.

Miss Libanski told the police that she met Lavignski recently and he made love to her so with he became afraid of him and told him never to call again. Then he began to have written several threatening letters and postcards to the girl and her mother. He finally, newspaper men say, it is said, about three being killed their sweethearts.

HOW TO MAKE BREAD, TOLD IN NEW COOKBOOK BY GOVERNMENT EXPERT

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wilson has given the world another cook book. In it he punctures the long-standing belief that hot bread is unwholesome. The new book is entitled "Bread and Bread-making," and in an introductory note the Secretary says that statements of a popular nature which are frequently met with regarding the unwholesomeness of hot bread have little foundation.

The bulletin says that the lightness and excellence of bread depend as much on the way it is made as on the materials used.

Many Boston housewives make their own bread and for their benefit the bread-making process advocated by Secretary Wilson's expert are here reproduced.

By HELEN ATWATER.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture Bulletin 389 on Bread and Bread Making.)

THE methods of mixing dough for raising and making quality good various, but certain general rules apply to them all. As yeast does not best at a moderately high temperature 27 degrees to 95 degrees F.) the materials of the dough should be at least lukewarm and the mixing after adding flour should be done in a warm place. Since gas passes from drafts and is lost in the outside air, crevices must be avoided as far as all the yeast.

If all portions of the dough are to be of a uniform texture and the yeast is to act evenly throughout the mass, the latter must be thoroughly mixed with the flour and water, since air is necessary for the growth of yeast, the latter must be thoroughly mixed with the flour and water, since air is necessary for the growth of yeast, all parts of the dough should be exposed to the air. Both these results are facilitated by the kneading process.

For the yeast to act to the best advantage the dough must be kept at a uniform temperature, since the yeast plant is killed by exposure to the pressure of the expanding gases of fermentation is also considerable. The gases of the dough are under the pressure of the atmosphere, and if the pressure of the expanding gases is greater than that of the atmosphere, the dough will rise more heavy and sogg. The pressure of the gases also gives an unpleasant process of support to the walls of the cells, which are thereby distended and rendered thin and tough. The amount of pressure depends upon the amount of the gases and upon the resistance offered by the walls of the cells. A dough in which the yeast plant has been killed by heat or cold will not rise, because the gases are not produced in sufficient quantity to overcome the resistance offered by the walls of the cells. A dough in which the yeast plant has been killed by heat or cold will not rise, because the gases are not produced in sufficient quantity to overcome the resistance offered by the walls of the cells. A dough in which the yeast plant has been killed by heat or cold will not rise, because the gases are not produced in sufficient quantity to overcome the resistance offered by the walls of the cells.

Rising of Dough.

After mixing the dough in the way considered above it is set in a warm place (77 degrees to 85 degrees F.) to rise. Here the yeast continues to work and the gas given off stretches the spaces between the particles of dough. If the gas is allowed to escape during the rising until the dough is stiff the stretching of the walls of the cells is greater than the elasticity of the gluten will permit, and the dough will stop rising. For bread the dough should be allowed to rise until it has increased in bulk about one-half to double its original bulk. If it is allowed to rise too long the dough will become sour and the bread will be poor in quality. If it is not allowed to rise enough the bread will be heavy and sodden.

The time required for the dough to rise depends upon the amount of yeast used, the temperature at which it is kept, and the character of the flour. The amount of yeast used depends upon the time at which the bread is wanted for use. If it is wanted in a short time a large amount of yeast must be used, but if time is no object a small amount will cause the dough to rise slowly. The amount of yeast used depends also upon the character of the flour. Flours differ greatly in their capacity to produce gas. Some flours require much more yeast than others. A high grade of flour will require more yeast than a low grade. Flour which is poor in gluten will require more yeast than flour which is rich in gluten. Flour which is poor in starch will require more yeast than flour which is rich in starch. Flour which is poor in sugar will require more yeast than flour which is rich in sugar. Flour which is poor in fat will require more yeast than flour which is rich in fat. Flour which is poor in protein will require more yeast than flour which is rich in protein. Flour which is poor in carbohydrates will require more yeast than flour which is rich in carbohydrates. Flour which is poor in minerals will require more yeast than flour which is rich in minerals. Flour which is poor in vitamins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in vitamins. Flour which is poor in enzymes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in enzymes. Flour which is poor in coenzymes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in coenzymes. Flour which is poor in cofactors will require more yeast than flour which is rich in cofactors. Flour which is poor in prosthetic groups will require more yeast than flour which is rich in prosthetic groups. Flour which is poor in apoenzymes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in apoenzymes. Flour which is poor in holoenzymes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in holoenzymes. Flour which is poor in metalloenzymes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in metalloenzymes. Flour which is poor in flavoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in flavoproteins. Flour which is poor in cytochromes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in cytochromes. Flour which is poor in hemoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in hemoproteins. Flour which is poor in chromoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in chromoproteins. Flour which is poor in nucleoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in nucleoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphoproteins. Flour which is poor in glycoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in glycoproteins. Flour which is poor in lipoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in lipoproteins. Flour which is poor in mucoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in mucoproteins. Flour which is poor in metalloproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in metalloproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphoglycoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphoglycoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphomucoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphomucoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphometalloproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphometalloproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphoflavoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphoflavoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphocytochromes will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphocytochromes. Flour which is poor in phosphohemoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphohemoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphochromoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphochromoproteins. Flour which is poor in phosphonucleoproteins will require more yeast than flour which is rich in phosphonucleoproteins.

Two Kinds of Dough.

Similarly the proportion of water which should be used varies with the strength of the flour. The stiffness of the dough depends upon the proportion of water used with the quantity of the flour. In general, nothing is gained by making the dough stiff. Materials can be mixed more easily when the dough is soft, and fermentation and proofing go on more rapidly when the dough is soft. The chief objection to soft dough is that it is usually heavier and more difficult to handle. Flour differs greatly in its capacity to absorb water, and the greatest possible care should be exercised in adding the water. It is always best to add the water a little at a time, and to work it into the dough thoroughly before more is added. Flour should be added to the dough until it is stiff enough to knead. The amount of flour required to produce this result varies greatly with the character of the flour. A dough in which the proportion of water is relatively large is called a soft dough, and one in which the proportion of water is relatively small is called a stiff dough. Between these two extremes are doughs of various degrees of softness or stiffness. The proper consistency for a dough depends upon the purpose for which it is to be used. Bread dough should be stiff enough to knead. Cake dough is usually soft enough to pour. The consistency of muffin batter is such that it will drop from the spoon with a decided plop. Batter for griddle cakes should be thin enough to pour readily from the spoon, but should not run over the griddle. Batter for drop cakes should be stiff enough to hold its shape when dropped from the spoon. Batter for pour cakes should be thin enough to pour readily from the spoon

HIST! BOY DETECTIVE IS ON YOUR TRAIL!

Bill Matthers of West Quincy Makes Formal Request for City Job.

Bill, the Bite and Red Rooney were blowing the safe. As the chilled steel door fell from its fastenings to the ground of a mutilated explosion, a youthful figure leaped from the inside of the vault and covered the intruders with revolvers.

"Who are you?" gasped Bill, the Bite and Red Rooney.

With a perfectly exasperating smile the youth replied calmly: "Me, but Bill Matthers, the Boy Detective. I know I have beat you to it!"—Police Tangle of 1935.

IT'S simply a case of Hist! and then some.

Bill Matthers, the Boy Detective from West Quincy, is in training. Crime won't be worth while when Bill really gets into the detecting game. Criminals will have to cut their haul to nothing or selling sewing machines or some other peaceful pursuit.

Who is Bill? That's what Mayor Sleeper of Quincy said to himself when he opened the following letter last week.

[illegible] to be a detective. I am [illegible] and I want a job. I am [illegible] years old and [illegible] I am willing to work [illegible] please send me word [illegible] Yours truly,

WILLIAM MATTHERS.

BANNER WEEK FOR REAL ESTATE SALES

Large Number of Important Deals Shows Spring Activity Has Arrived.

BROKERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Transactions Include All Sections of the City, With More to Come

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

THE volume of real estate sales last week was the largest of any week this year and judging from the business now on the books the present week promises to be one of the most important ever recorded. The Spring season is now fully underway. Apparently this big record will be even surpassed by the totals of the next few weeks for the reports from brokers in all parts of the city all show that their business is on the increase and many deals are now being negotiated which will shortly be closed up.

Though many valuable and important properties changed hands in the city last week the suburban districts still maintain the lead in point of sales and brokers and operators in suburban house lots and acreage report an unusually heavy demand for their offerings. This trading is not restricted to any one section of the suburbs, but the movement seems to be general over the entire area.

Increase Is Looked For.

Although many of the city are now enjoying activity in transactions, but some of the brokers do are that the downtown business is not what it should be. They consider this year for the time of year, but an increase in sales is looked for as a number of important deals are now ready to be closed and the papers sent to record. A few sales reported yesterday were the following:

On property Nos. 21 23 Howard street, corner of Bowker street, West End, sold by Moses H. W. Stahls to Dale Grilli. The property contains 2,000 square feet of land, has a frontage of 40 feet and a half on Howard street, and is assessed for $84,000.

Henry H. Hunnewell has purchased of Mrs. Mary E. Hunnewell the estate on the northerly side of Beacon street, West End, and the southerly side of Bowker street, containing 10,000 square feet of land, with a frontage of 100 feet on Beacon street and 100 feet on Bowker street. The property is assessed for $84,000.

An "American Plan" to Get a Fine Piano

We have made arrangements whereby any reader of this paper can secure a fine new Upright Piano of almost any of the best well-known makes at a price that is lower than ever before quoted by any Piano House. The pianos will be sold on what we call our "American Plan," which enables any responsible man or woman who will set aside a few pennies a day to secure a piano at once. No waiting and no large payments down. Ample provision made in our "American Plan" against sickness, loss of work, etc. We have investigated and closely examined every "easy term" plan of selling pianos on credit that is being operated in Boston and New England, and none of them can be compared to our American Plan. There is no home that cannot have a fine piano. Get some member of the family to sign and mail to us today the coupon under the picture, and we will send information that will surprise you. How we do it and why we do it told plainly and honestly.

Are You Depriving YOUR Children of a Musical Education?

If you are you will surely regret it some day. Your girl or boy may have slumbering somewhere in the soul the spark of genius. Who knows? Remember that almost all the great composers were in their childhood days without advantages—and it remained for some intelligent person to assist them and help in the development of that musical genius that has for centuries delighted and educated the whole world.

IF YOUR NEIGHBOR'S CHILD HAS A PIANO WHY SHOULDN'T YOURS HAVE ONE?

Say to yourself—"Yes, My Child shall have the advantages that I, as an American citizen, am to-day able, and easily able, to give her."—Fill out this coupon today—Don't wait.

Your Daughter Should Have the Same Advantages as the Girl in the Picture.

The American Home Is Not Complete Without a Piano

WE MAKE IT EASY FOR YOU TO GET ONE.

Have a nice piano in your home at once. Don't wait any longer. You know very well that you cannot say that your home is properly furnished unless you have a piano. Every up-to-date home has a piano, both for the fine touch it gives the room and for the great pleasure and entertainment it affords you and your friends. Imagine trying to entertain your friends, who like music and song, without a piano in the house. Be up-to-date—get a piano. We have all the best makes in our "American Plan."

FIRST OIL STOCKS LISTED ON 'CHANGE

New Era In Speculation Comes With the Associated Shares of California.

With the listing this week in the New York Stock Exchange of the forty million dollar capital stock of the Associated Oil Company comes a new era in speculative investments, for this is the first oil company to be listed on the Exchange.

A world wide interest in petroleum has recently centered in London, prices in the fields of Java, Asia, Persia, Newfoundland and the island of Trinidad, and the attention paid petroleum by English periodicals is second only to that in evidence in the United States.

Advices from Paris commenting on the unsatisfactory copper condition in France state that many traders who make a practice of speculating in copper warrants have become weary of the declining tendencies in Oil, M. S. & S. and are now devoting their attention to petroleum securities. As this country will have to wait until at least the November for the last word in the case of The People vs. the Corporations; and in view of the uncertainty of any coalition of the copper companies, capital is seeking its way into new enterprises not connected with big corporations. The most popular just now being oil.

Western Gushers Popular.

Among the oil companies to attract most attention are those with fields in Southern California, where fancy oil gushers have made the industry become more important to that State than gold mining. Some of these producers are very rich, petroleum having produced 40,000 barrels a day, and the yield seems practically inexhaustible.

The Associated Oil Company was incorporated in 1901 in California and conducts a producing business in any large petroleum field in the State, having producing properties in the United States, Java, Canada, Asia Minor and Mexico, but stockholders are said to be mainly residents of the country. The liability in one reason for the stock selling at only $30 a share.

The Associated Oil Company is controlled by the Standard Oil interests, who hold a majority of the stock, particularly full of details for the investor. Such information does not appear to be given out on a very small scale. It is a safe, far-reaching process, and does not appear to be in any way unfavorable to producers. As the Standard Oil interests ever have, and as they undoubtedly will throughout the world, seem to be behind the Associated Oil Company, the stock will undoubtedly be in demand for others to sell and become more important every year.

Wells May Dry Up.

Gushers have been struck in the United States recently at a great rate for a short time, but all oil wells become exhausted after a few years, regardless of how much is produced. The rapidity and the immediate decline of the output of wells of any producing [illegible] has been very great. In Texas, where [illegible] wells were struck in the Spindle Top field, the production declined from thousands of barrels a day to a few hundred barrels in a few years.

There are many wells in the Coalinga district, California, which have been producing for a number of years, but the output is now only a few barrels a day. Reports of the Standard Oil Company's operations in the Eastern States show that the production of its wells is constantly declining, and that the company is forced to spend large sums of money each year in boring new wells to keep up the output.

Coal Scarce There.

What makes oil properties in California particularly attractive is the scarcity of coal in that part of the country. There is a ready market for the vast quantity produced and the Associated Oil Company or other producers have no trouble to buy every barrel. Prices are low, as well for the purchasing power of the dollar as money in bank.

With very few exceptions, wells of more than one thousand barrels a day, and in some districts many of more than a thousand barrels, the number of barrels it may produce in a month. It is natural that the average gushers should be more or less short lived, in fact that the more prolific the district the less valuable are the wells, since they must all decline in a short time.

Some of the most prominent producers in California are devoting their energies to the development of properties which promise to yield in steady volume the highest grade fuel oil.

COPPER IS FIRM, BUT PRICES LOW

Little Improvement to Be Noted in Metal Market, Declares Expert.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, April 30.—Copper stocks act well, all things considered. In the majority of cases, lower prices have been made during the week, but there has been a great amount of press ure. This substantiates the theory that coppers have been liquidated to a point which encourages moderate purchases. In fact, this has been witnessed in certain specialties, notably Lake Copper and North Butte. The corner has been turned, apparently, in others, but these are the most conspicuous examples at present.

Little improvement is to be noted in the metal market, although the situation in this community is not bad. Calumet & Hecla people cleaned the market up at 13 cents and there is little or no Lake copper offering under this price. The discontinuance of the monthly copper report, if it is carried out, is not so important as would at first seem. It is not what the surplus supplies are so much as what amount is in the hands of consumers. The latter is the real key to the situation.

A lot is being made of the so-called porphyry mines. Admittedly they are producing large amounts of copper and at a minimum cost, but the question is how long will this condition of affairs exist. To be plain, is the large tonnage reported by these mines actual or more or less fictitious. It is the fashion to speak of the large amount of ore blocked out. Drill holes are made at certain distances and all the ground between these drills is valued on this basis. Ordinarily in mining there are rich and lean spots, but this does not seem to be a factor in the reckoning of these new mines.

The Guggenheim interests will not listen to any restriction in the output of copper. From their point of view why should they? All they have to do is to shovel the ore out from the side of the mountain, rush it to the smelter for treatment and take their profits. They are making hay while the sun shines, but some of the older and better known deep-shaft mines will be producing copper when some of these porphyries have gone out of business.

The Amalgamated people realizing these conditions, have given up all attempts to regulate the production in keeping with consumption and are biding their time. Copper, in the meantime, continues heavy and the outlook is for a continuance of this. Pending such times the copper share market will continue uncertain and stocks with merit will be taken as offered on the market.

One of the things that is puzzling the street is why, if the Utah Consolidated mine has lost its ore reserves, does the management make a new contract with the Cole-Bran people for treatment of ore at their new smelters? The new contract calls for a bigger tonnage than was the case with the Garfield smelter, which is controlled by the Guggenheim interests. There is a wooley head in the ore pile somewhere. Perhaps the Utah Consolidated management knows where to look for additional reserves of ore if the old ones have all diminished. It looks as if the Amalgamated and affiliated interests were drawing away from the Guggenheims and that the fight was to be extended rather than looking closer relations.

Even though the New York market had a break of close to 2 points this forenoon, the local copper share list held wonderfully steady. In fact coppers look as if they wanted to advance, but with a 3/4 point drop in Amalgamated, such as occurred this forenoon, it is practically out of the question. It is generally believed in local financial circles that there ought to be a turn in the New York decline very shortly now and in this event copper stocks are in a position to give a good account of themselves.

NEW LOW LEVELS IN SHARP STOCK BREAK

Copper Shares Extremely Weak at the Close of the Market—Losses From 1 to 3 Points Recorded.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Another sharp break carried prices in Wall street to new low levels for the year to-day. Losses ranged from 1 to 3 points. Copper shares were extremely weak just at the close, on reports of a strike to be declared against the American Smelting and Refining Company. Steel, Union Pacific and Reading were under pressure. Even the local gas stock let go. Consolidated and Brooklyn Union declining about 3 points each to a new level. Northern Pacific was another conspicuously weak stock.

Chief among reasons given for selling was the report that the Interstate Commerce Commission will refuse to permit the general advance of freight rates demanded by the railroads. In the event of this being done, those railroads that have not already agreed to advance wages would refuse to do so and labor troubles of a very serious nature would be precipitated. Eastern railroads have not yet formulated their plans for advancing rates, being [illegible] dependent by the attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The statement of the banks showing the actual condition of business on Thursday night confirmed the reports current throughout the week that there had been heavy calls for loans.

While the average statement shows loans to be increased $317,800, the actual statement shows a decrease of $7,767,700. There is an actual decrease in cash of $13,416,500, against an average decrease of $10,720,400. The bank reserve is now down to an average of 25.37 per cent. Deposits and the surplus has been reduced to the nominal sum of $4,588,150. Two years ago there was a surplus of $10,799,625.

Brokers for investment houses report a very heavy demand for standard stocks in the last hour of business. Orders that had been placed several days ago under the market were filled. There was specially good investment buying in the Hill stocks, steel and to local gas stocks.

The local gas stocks are absurdly cheap from an investment point of view, because no government action can reach them and their earnings are several times the dividend requirements.

The bear party in cotton had apparently expected that the government's investigation would frighten the bulls out of their position and there was considerable excitement, therefore, when at the close of the week the leading bulls accepted delivery of 200,000 bales of a money value of about $17,000,000. This cotton must be paid for to-morrow. Provision by the banks for dividend and interest disbursements caused an advance of call money on Friday to 7 per cent. New York exported $14,500,000 of gold to London, an heavy calling of loans was necessary to enable the banks to adjust their surplus reserves. Much of the selling during the week was due to this.

Another reason given for the selling of stocks by both Americans and foreigners was that the Department of Justice issued a statement in connection with the cotton prosecution which was universally accepted as an apology.

Next to the frost, the Steel dividend and announcement of earnings and orders on hand hurt prices most. Semi-official statements had prepared the public for earnings of about $40,000,000 for the first quarter; the actual figures were $37,616,876. Orders on hand showing a shrinkage of about 500,000 tons since January 1. While there is no doubt that the trust is earning enough to justify the 5 per cent. dividend, the heavy selling of Steel shares by certain speculative directors of the trust gave the public an impression that the dividend had been increased to help make a market. This was strongly insisted upon after the disclosure of orders are running into the trust at less than 70 per cent. of its capacity.

SPEAKER WALKER SOUNDS FINANCIAL WARNING TO STATE

"Pay as You Go; Stop Borrowing," He Says, at Meeting of Mayors.

Speaker Joseph Walker of the House of Representatives, at the dinner of the Mayors' Club of Massachusetts yesterday at Young's Hotel, warned the State and the municipalities of the State against the danger of going into debt and decreed emphatically for a pay-as-you-go policy.

The expense of the government of the State, and of each of the towns and cities, Speaker Walker declared, must be paid out of the taxes of each year unless there was some unusual expense that would nobly call for the tax note.

Pay off your debts and stop borrowing. That is the import of the Speaker's message to the half hundred mayors and former mayors who gathered at the monthly dinner.

Governor Eben S. Draper was present for a time, being called out from the dinner to confer with some of the milk men on the milk strike of the farmers. When he returned it was said that he had arranged for a conference with some of the milk consumers to-morrow, when he hoped that steps would be taken to settle the milk controversy.

Beware of Borrowing.

Mayor John W. Coughlin of Fall River presided, and when Speaker Walker was introduced he was received with much enthusiasm. In the course of his address Speaker Walker said:

"The Commonwealth does not borrow money for ordinary running expenses, but she does borrow money for certain unusual expenditures, such as expenditures for public buildings, which is usually assumed by doing the proposition that unusual expenditures should be put into the annual tax levy whether to be for running expenses or for permanent improvements.

"There is but one sound reason for the borrowing of money by the State or by a municipality and that is, to meet a really extraordinary expenditure which, if put into the tax levy of any one year, would cause an unusual and excessive jump in the tax rate. Ordinary running expenditures, whether for the construction of public buildings or for street lighting, should be put into the tax levy.

All sums should be paid off in equal annual payments until the debt is extinguished, and for this purpose it is true that the establishment of a sinking fund. The former method is not only safer and more certain, but it is cheaper. The borrowing policy means a increasing debt, and in the end the annual interest and principal payments which must go into the annual tax levy are much greater than the amounts to be paid for the same improvements under the pay-as-you-go policy.

State Debt Growing.

Mr Walker then called attention to the fact that the expenses of the State were growing much swifter than its population and wealth. During the last fifteen years the annual expenses have jumped from $6,500,000 to $12,250,000, while the population has only increased 20 per cent, and the valuation of property 50 per cent. The net debt, he said, is growing at the rate of $1,000,000 a year, and it was time we called a halt and "frankly put this $1,000,000 into the State tax, and so let taxpayers know what is happening."

Speaker Walker said that rising and lower tax rates in ordinary running expenses and that income is the worst source of all.

"Her debt," he said, "is staggering, and we are trying to borrow more. I appeal to one at the stand which the Finance Committee is for more taxes.

"The reason for this excessive borrowing is obvious. Each administration wishes to raise no incremental while the present one stand and at the same time wishes to make a good showing to the taxpayers. The good lies in the one thinks about. An increased tax rate is everybody's bugaboo. So each administration borrows all it can and leaves that and the next only small and temporary to be paid for by the tax rate.

"Debts must be paid in the end and interest must be added to principal. These charges sap the nobility of the municipality and of the Commonwealth. It is time we got to face the situation and place all annual expenditures where they belong, viz., into the tax levy. Then municipals the get deeper and deeper into the slough of financial despond.

Urges State Supervision.

Now, what is to be done about it? I believe that in all citizens, if they clearly understood the results of bad finance, would stand for sound finance. If every dollar of expenditure were required to go into the tax levy, the taxpayer would feel it immediately and so would keep the administration within the bounds of the municipality could afford to pay. The sin of borrowing now falls the taxpayers in a way to escape.

My remedy is to let the common wealth supervise, first establish a sound policy, second, and put her own finances on a sound basis. Third, that she exercise an effective control over the financial operations of her cities and towns.

"I do not believe in interference with local self government in principal. That charges sap the nobility of the municipality I pay. No administration has a right to go to face the situation and place all annual expenditures where they belong, viz., into the tax levy. Then municipals the get deeper and deeper into the slough of financial despond.

MARY MEYER TELLS OF FIRST TERM OF MAYOR FITZGERALD

The year 1906 saw the inauguration of little Johnny Fitz as Mayor of his native city. John F. The ... was a very elaborate affair. I should say one of the most elaborate that I ever attended. Nearly everybody was there that I had ever seen in politics, except Martin Lomasney. Fitzgerald's administration started just like all those that preceded it. The only topic of conversation was patronage. Jim Donovan resumed as Superintendent of Streets on inauguration day.

Of course this is the important position that the Mayor has to fill. Jim Doyle had been promised it, not before election day, but after election. Jim was a candidate for Street Commissioner at the preceding election and was defeated by Hannan of Dorchester. Of course his defeat could be easily traced to Tommy ... as ... Ward Boss.

THE FEAR OF THE UNKNOWN

In the Dark Ages It Resulted in Panic and Despair---Its Gradual Passing Has Proved That the Human Mind Is Developing With the March of the Centuries.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal Examiner

IVE a man hope and you give him something to work for.. If there were no evidence that, despite apathy and original sin, human beings are really getting wiser and better, there would be little use in working for their future development.

A little study of the known history of the great comet which is now rushing toward the earth at an incredible speed proves satisfactorily that human beings ARE growing wiser and better.

The efforts of the great men of the centuries have not been in vain. A vast ignorance, breeding terror and unrest, has been dissipated. The fear of the unknown no longer drives men to despair and suicide, as it did in the days of the comet's earlier visits, when, shining like a flaming sword in the sky, it frightened men into paralysis, driving them cowering into caves, there to remain trembling and shuddering till the Terror had passed.

To-day we know that the comet is coming, even before we can see it in the skies. We know that the earth will, on May 18 or 19, pass directly through the tail, that will soon look like a long streamer of flame in the night sky.

Yet men go quietly about their business, unconcerned and unterrified. In every civilized country the people will look placidly on this spectre of the heavens during the days of its approach, and the night that our little planet whisks through its trail of vapor ninety-nine out of every hundred of the inhabitants of the world will retire to rest and sleep as peacefully as their consciences will permit.

There is no more fear of the comet. It has vanished like the fear of ghosts, of witches, and of a hundred other supernatural things which, born of ignorance, were no less horrible because they were imaginary.

The dispelling of the terror of the comet has not been the work of a day, or even of a century. Long before this age of marvellous mechanical progress, long before electric lights, or trolley cars, or steam engines, or telephones had been dreamed of, the great minds of Newton and Halley were busy studying the universe, and laying the foundation for the present knowledge of the bodies that dot space as far as it can be seen with the most powerful telescope.

Halley, Newton's friend and adviser, had given especial study to comets, the spectacular inhabitants of the universe which appeared to follow no regular pathways, to obey no known laws, appearing at unexpected times and filling human beings with amazement and dread.

He found that there had been a "comet scare" at fairly regular intervals of about seventy-five years, and after profound reflection he came to the conclusion that these panics were caused by the recurring visits of the same comet.

Then, with the help of Newton, who had but lately discovered the law of gravitation, by which every body in space exerts an influence upon every other body, Halley predicted that this same pillar of light would reappear.

"Wherefore," he wrote, "if it should appear, according to our prediction, about the year 1758, impartial posterity will not refuse to acknowledge that this was first discovered by an Englishman."

It was in the year 1682 that Halley made this prediction. Not only was it fulfilled, but at regular intervals since then the comet has returned, and "impartial posterity" has since then known it by the name of the first man who learned its true nature.

Before Halley's time the arrival of the comet had resulted in panics which were in proportion to the ignorance of the times.

Each epoch had its superstitions, each seeming ridiculous to the succeeding epoch, as doubtless some of our ideas to-day will seem ridiculous to the people who come after us.

The ancient writers called comets sabres, swords, helmet plumes, severed heads, javelins; said that they glowed with bloody fire, or spoke of them as of a brightness that could hardly be looked upon—a brightness in which the face of God might be traced, were only human eyes strong enough to behold it.

In later ages the people were even more fantastic in their behavior when a comet appeared in the sky. Alphonse the Sixth, King of Portugal, on observing a comet above him in 1664, rushed to his terrace, denounced and cursed the untroubled traveller and threatened it with his pistol. Needless to say, the comet continued on its way, paying no attention to the infuriated monarch.

The most celebrated of the visits of Halley's comet was in 1456, three years after the capture of Constantinople by the Turks.

The Mussulmans regarded it as a Christian menace, a prophecy of the overthrow of their religion. In it the Christians saw a warning of a Mussulman victory.

Yet before these days of fright and superstition the philosopher Seneca, with a wisdom that seems little short of miraculous, considering the scant knowledge of his time, opposed the ideas of his contemporaries, and held the view that comets were merely travellers about the sun, and that they came and went at regular intervals. "Comets," he wrote, "move steadily in the paths prescribed by Nature," and he ventured the prophecy that posterity would be amazed at the refusal of his contemporaries to accept so simple a truth.

He was right against all mankind.

In times when every change of the moon was regarded as an omen or a warning, the appearance of such a dragon of the skies as a comet was naturally taken as a messenger with some mighty tidings.

It was typical of Middle Age ignorance that such tidings were usually construed to be bad. Everywhere rose men who foretold the end of the earth—its complete annihilation in a sheet of flame.

Closely studying the writings and legends that dealt with comets since the beginning of recorded history, Halley determined that only one comet, swinging regularly through an elliptical orbit about the sun, could be the cause of the panics that occurred at such nearly exact intervals.

Disregarding other comets which appeared at other times, he traced the story of the one that hung in the sky in his own time.

With the aid of the rules laid down by Newton he calculated how much it would be deflected in its course by the bodies it approached, how much its flight would be delayed by these deflections, and then, by a series of calculations truly amazing, he made his marvellous prophecy

As 1758 began to approach, astronomers recalled this prophecy, and began to search the skies for its fulfillment

It was an amateur astronomer, a farmer named Palitzsch, who on January 21, 1859, only a few months beyond the date set by Halley, first descried the comet in the sky.

Halley had triumphed. Though long since dead and buried, his fame was secure through the centuries.

But the fear of the comet was not yet conquered. Every succeeding reappearance plunged the world in fresh dread. What if this comet should be deflected out of the orbit it had followed, and come in head-on collision with the earth?

The spectroscope, by which the composition of a heavenly body can be determined, had not been invented.

Of the weight of the comet little was known. It was supposed that its head was solid, and that its tail was of much the same composition as flame.

The possibilities of a collision were always thought of when the comet approached. The FEAR OF THE UNKNOWN appalled men and made them sick with fright whenever Halley's comet or any of the other siderea' tramps appeared above the horizon.

But, building on the discovery of Halley, astronomers were busy with tremendous labors. The orbits of the many comets were worked out with marvellous arithmetical precision.

It has been found that the earth will, in fact, pass through the tail of Halley's comet in May, but as it is now known that the substance composing the tail is thinner than the thinnest vapor that floats in the sky, this prophecy no longer holds any terror. The earth has passed through the tail of a comet before, and only astronomers knew that anything unusual was happening.

As far as comets are concerned, the fear of the unknown has passed

There is but one chance in many millions of an actual collision with the head of a comet, and as the head is not a solid body, even such a collision may not do so much as to deflect the earth from its orbit

In this story of the comet there is material for hope of better things for the world. The wonderful labors of the astronomers since Halley's day have brought peace of mind and tranquillity to the inhabitants of this planet in these days which would otherwise be filled with terror and forebodings.

The human mind is progressing, slowly but steadily.

The knowledge that the astronomer gains through tremendous labor is disseminated throughout the world, and becomes a part of the knowledge of every schoolboy.

With the superstition regarding comets other superstitions are dying.

The men who think are finding out the mysteries of the skies as well as of the earth. Franklin robbed the lightning of its supernatural terrors, and his successors harnessed it and made it do the work of millions of men.

The great mass of mankind does not think. But we have still cause to be thankful that a few men do think, and that because of their thinking we are no longer a race of terror-stricken savages, but a civilized people, gradually coming to an understanding of the universe that we live in, and to a realization of the importance of doing our share toward adding to human enlightenment.

O'CONNELL MEMORIAL INSPIRATION TO IRISH RACE

Boston's Sons of Emerald Isle Plan Monument Worthy of Great Deeds

In the pass for the handsome ... buildings which will consist of ... University Heights in Newton ... constitute the new Boston College ... single feature is more striking than the idea combined under the project of an O'Connell Memorial and Irish Hall of Fame.

From the start—the idea is scarcely a year old—the suggestion to incorporate in the new college a group of buildings that shall be commemorative of Ireland's great history and of Ireland's greatest modern leader, met the unanimous approval of the Irish race. It was to them racial sentiment the project directly appealed. The more the idea has been studied the warmer grew the admiration of the thinking Irish people of Boston and of New England for the patriotic spirit of those who are the actual leaders of the movement.

And Soon Cured Perfectly and Economically—Doctor Called It Eczema and Little Sufferer Rubbed and Twisted All the Time.

CUTICURA AGAIN PROVED "THE GREAT SKIN CURE"

"My baby boy was about nine months old when he had a breaking out on his back which was very annoying. It used to make him very fretful and cross because it seemed to worry him so much. In the meantime I was sick myself. I had my doctor look at the baby and he told me it was eczema and he wanted to treat it. But a friend of mine told me that nurse could be cured cheaper than any doctor could do it for and in much less time. So I started using the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment which I soon found out was what I ought to have had before for the eczema was not to itch so the baby could rest. So I did still for he was itching and twisting all the time. I used the Cuticura Remedies about three times the first day and soon he noticed the good it was doing, for he began to get rest from rubbing his neck.

"So I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and when I got through I wo ozen of the ewest hotographs of ily lsie.

A New Picture Every Day in the Year for Lily Elsie.

JUST at the present moment Miss Lily Elsie is the toast of the gilded youth in London, and no actress is more popular. A careful estimate shows that she is the most photographed woman in the world.

She has been called the "Guardsmen's Goddess," because the young officers in the King's household regiments, most of them noblemen, are her warmest admirers. Miss Elsie has kept her head unturned and looks upon her numerous lovelorn adorers as passing waves upon the wind.

She is famous above all for two things—for having been photographed more frequently than any actress ever on a London stage and for having had more proposals of marriage. It is said that she has been photographed at least once every week day in the year. Even then the insatiable demands of the photographic firms were not satisfied. They could not obtain enough photographs to supply the enormous demand.

Miss Elsie possesses that peculiar soft, winsome pathetic type of face that Edna May has a certain perfect femininity that touches a man's heart straightway. It is the womanly sort of loveliness very alluring and very sweet. Artists, too, grow enthusiastic over her because she has such perfectly accentuated features. She has been sketched and painted almost as much as she has been photographed.

Miss Elsie has all her gowns made by that artist of dress, Lady Duff-Gordon, but

The Very Amusing Confusion Mlle. Polaire's Auto Has Caused---and Everyone Is Wondering How W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Can Admire the Grotesque Actress and Neglect His Beautiful Wife

Portrait Sketch of Mdlle. Polaire, by Jean Veber, he Famous French Artist, and a Photograph of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Driving His Auto at Versailles.

Paris, April 21.

ONE day all Paris heard that Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, the great American millionaire, had gone for a long automobile ride with Mlle. Polaire, "the ugliest woman in Paris," and been left to walk home.

Now everybody is wondering whether it was Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., or Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who had this interesting experience.

Irreverent people refer to it as "Monsieur Vanderbilt" as if there were only one. Many a Frenchman hopes that "Vanderbilt" will come to her like Jupiter visiting Danae in a shower of gold.

Under such circumstances they are content with the magic name and do not worry about the initials. Americans, however, like to be more exact, and they are beginning to persuade some Parisians that there is considerable importance in this little point.

Mdlle. Polaire is quite sure that it was Mr. Vanderbilt, senior, and she ought to know. She makes no bones about the episode.

On the other hand, well informed members of the American colony say it must have been W. K., Jr.

"Mr. Vanderbilt, senior," they say, is one of the most discreet and dignified of men and a grandfather. This is just one of Polaire's jokes. She is putting it on father, when everybody knows it was Willie K., Jr., who took the ride, and wasn't he awfully angry?"

Mr. Vanderbilt, Senior, evidently takes this view of the matter, for from Polaire's own statement it appears that he does not now claim the pleasure of her acquaintance.

The newspaper men heard at first that it was Willie K., Jr., who played the leading male part in the little farce. Then, if it was Willie K., Jr., a new wonder arises, for how could he admire and seek the society of the ugliest woman in Paris, when he was allowing his wife, one of the prettiest women in America, to drift away from him?

Such perversity is known to occur in Paris, however, and is one of the interesting puzzles of human nature. Experience proves that a man of a certain type will even take pleasure in looking at eyes that are like a fish's and listening to prattle from the largest mouth in Paris, prattle that is pretty sure to be "excessivement canaille" as the French say. This conduct becomes particularly shocking when the man who admires the ugly women has a wife who is all that is lovely, sweet, refined and charming, and whom he might win back to him by patient effort. Doubtless the ugly woman is amusing, and there are men who would rather be amused than anything else.

The mere existence of such taste would fully explain why Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has separated from her husband and is now contemplating making a brief stay at Reno, Nev., in order to make the separation more complete.

Well, return to our puzzle in Paris. Perhaps it was a wicked impostor who passed himself off on Mdlle. Polaire as "Mr. Vanderbilt," and thus found a cherished opportunity to make the acquaintance of one of the idols of Paris. Altogether it is a farce quite like those that make the fame of the Palais Royal Theatre.

After the incident of Mr Vanderbilt and the auto was reported, your correspondent called on Mdlle. Polaire and had the pleasure of seeing the largest mouth in Paris in active operation.

"Of course it was old Mr. Vanderbilt," she said. "We are not on speaking terms now, but he knows me.

"And he remembers me, too, although our acquaintance was short and ended unsweetly. I first saw Mr. Vanderbilt at the races in the Bois. In fact, I met him about everywhere people go. He always seemed to regard me with interest. One day we met conventionally through one of these little trifles that make life so interesting. He told me he admired me as an artist, and I can never resist that appeal. You see, I do not take the slightest interest in men as women that I do.

"A woman can blow away her feelings in a rubbish heap or anywhere else, long as she keeps them to herself. One may be hurt and hurt and hurt, but she must not let others know it. Mr. Vanderbilt said that he thought me one of the most wonderful of women. He repeated it over and over.

"And then because I have a little joke he gets angry and actually declares he 'never knew me.' I like that. Well, men are queer, even though we cannot get along without them. But the American people are so polite, very polite; then all of a sudden they are cross, and then forget to be polite any more.'

What exactly was the auto episode, that caused all this fuss? One day, according to report, Mr. Vanderbilt invited Mdlle. Polaire to motor with him to St. Germain, a rather distant suburb of Paris, famous for its chateau and museum, and to dine there at the Pavillon Henri Quatre. On their return, Mdlle took a fancy to some flowers in a wayside garden and said: "Oh, Willie, get me some of those." Mr. Vanderbilt sent the chauffeur after them, but this not pleasing the lady, set out himself to gather a bouquet.

Then Mdlle. Polaire, seized suddenly with a whim and being an experienced motorist, decided to see whether she could run such a big car as by herself. She forgot Mr. Vanderbilt and the chauffeur, and they had to trudge all the way back to Paris in the deep, dark night.

Mdlle. Polaire complained afterward that she did not get the flowers. Then some philosopher explained it all, perhaps Mr. Vanderbilt, fazed by her behavior, had used the old test and had wiled the long walk back by pulling petal after petal—"She loves me, she loves me not," until the fiched lady was exhausted.

This was a pretty explanation, but according to Mlle. Polaire's own account Mr. Vanderbilt did not come back again to see her and did not care even to speak to her again after the episode.

Young Mr. Vanderbilt does not like to have his amusements and adventures published to the world. He has been credited with some epigrammatic remarks on this topic. On his return from Monte Carlo to Paris recently he was quoted as saying:

"I am extremely angry with all newspaper people. The society papers of Nice and Monte Carlo kept annoying every day that Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., were dining at [illegible]'s and doing other things. Now you know my wife wasn't there at all. Those newspapers have no right to do that sort of [illegible]. When I go out with my wife I am delighted to have her name printed in the papers, but when I'm with the wife of somebody else, it's nobody's business."

Whatever the cause, there is little doubt here that the separation of the [illegible] Vanderbilts [illegible]. The older Vanderbilt [illegible] to bring his son and daughter-in-law together, but the [illegible] was [illegible] as he was with [illegible] Mrs. Vanderbilt, [illegible] Miss Virginia Fair, of California, with her sister, Mrs. [illegible] Oelrichs, of the late Senator Fair. A [illegible] Board of Strategy" at [illegible] is said to have made the [illegible] young couple started in up[illegible] was apparently an ideal marriage. [illegible] were young, of cheerful [illegible] socially presentable and [illegible] in love, she as beautiful as [illegible] for [illegible] ugly—[illegible] seemed of any future difference [illegible] them.

[illegible] first years of their married life were never apart. In fact, [illegible] a few weeks after the birth of their first child, Muriel, who is now nine years old, Mrs. Vanderbilt put her in charge of a nurse and sailed with her husband for Europe.

"I can get a nurse to take care of baby, but there isn't anyone I would allow to take care of my husband, so I'm going with him," she said.

They were just as devoted after the birth of their second and third children. It was not until January of last year that there was any signs of trouble. Then Mr. Vanderbilt sailed to France with his friend Captain M. Parker and it was noticed that his wife was not on the pier to say good bye to him.

Mr. Vanderbilt seemed to be having a delightful time, motoring and entertaining and playing at Monte Carlo. Mrs. Vanderbilt was cheerful, too.

Articles of separation were reported signed last September between them.

Now Mrs. Vanderbilt, Jr., is one of the real beauties of America. She is petite and dark, with big, appealing eyes and has a wonderful charm of manner. She is very fond of amateur theatricals, and her poses as the tableaux given last season in New York were strikingly picturesque. Particularly was she effective as Cleopatra mourning for Antony absent.

It is the contrast between her beauty and the ugliness of Mlle. Polaire that is not such an edge to the gossip. Mlle. Polaire is unique. Singularly gifted by nature inversely in the beginning, the actress faced when she grew old enough to understand, the extraordinary problem of how to make herself attractive. At first she tried to become beautiful. She grew discouraged. Hercules couldn't have done it. Then she had a flash of genius.

"I might attain a mediocre prettiness or a mediocre ugliness," she reasoned. "But that as effective as complete ugliness. Voila! I shall make myself supremely ugly."

So she started in. As other women pray "Make me beautiful," she prayed "Make me ugly." Her mouth is abnormally large, like a gash across the face, and with lines that give it an oddly fishlike look. Polaire accentuated it by painting not only the lips, but the gums and tongue a vivid red. Her waist is abnormally small for hips and shoulders. She laces it still tighter. On the stage she wears ill-shaped boots without heels to make her feet look uglier. She is brilliant, entirely without vanity and possesses a sense of humor that makes people believe more than anything else that wicked little automobile story.

"I was born ugly. I made my ugliness my fortune," she says. "I looked upon the stage. It was crowded with beauties. 'Parbleu,' I said to myself, apparently this road to success was not made for me. I must carve out for myself."

"I had eccentricities I might say, to overcume. Instead I accentuated them. If I had a curse that was good I made every effort to obliterate it.

"But I have done much for nature. And then my chin is pointed and long, my nose looks like a duck's. When I was trying to be pretty I was unhappy. My unhappiness, dear Heaven, am I still so? Now I am happy for I am almost women. I have no fear of growing old, for the older I get the uglier I am, and thus, until I lose my unparalleled ugliness, the greater I think of a woman's beauty the more I am sure that she will be ugly. It is a world beautiful. That joy is mine by my ugliness. I have no rivals. The world of women still clings to beauty.

"When people say to me, 'You look pale today!' [illegible] Think of [illegible] Those rouges are [illegible] How stupid to suppose [illegible] a joy of it when you have got where I am—the sense of ugliness!"

Yet, that a little woman will soon [illegible] American with her surpassing [illegible] and her peculiar art.

As for Mr. Vanderbilt—which, one it was—[illegible]—Honi [illegible]

Dressing the Young Girl.

Simplicity, and Always Simplicity--Is the One Thing To Be Striven For Says Lady Duff-Gordon, the Famous "Lucile" of London, Discussing Differences Here and Abroad

LADY DUFF GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, who writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with models from her foreign and American establishments, discusses this week, "Dressing a Young Girl."

For six years Lady Duff-Gordon has made a special study of and has a separate department for this line of dress. In England all the young girls who can afford it go to her for their debutante dresses. There has grown up there a sort of feeling that to make their entre into society in one of her gowns brings them good luck and a brilliant marriage. The mothers think so, too.

Perhaps it is because "Lucile" puts so much of her own personality in the gowns that they are "lucky," but it is a fact that in scores of instances the longed-for match of the season, or the "catch of the season" has been caught by a debutante in one of her gowns.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York.

greater advantage, to [illegible] don't seem to see how terribly bad is for the children's future.

But you ask me what I consider [illegible] most approved modes for young girls. Well, I have diverged into things which have nothing to do with modes.

So, me answer the question as [illegible]

I do not think young girls should wear false hair or elaborate coiffures. Their hair should be dressed in the simplest way suited to their individual style. Personally I like better the way the Japanese girls have of letting it hang straight down the back until they come out. It is wonderful beautiful, and conveys to me the beauty of treatment, and is, above all, and I don't feel that I can become too vehemous in repeating this too much—simple.

I like the English fashion of sisters dressing exactly alike in every particular until they are eighteen years old and make their debut. I think that this conduces to the reserve and protection and moulding of thought and gentleness which should be all that is thought of for the girl before she reaches that age.

I have been asked what jewels a young girl should wear. I answer emphatically "None," unless a few pearls.

The perfectly dressed young girl to my mind wears nothing that does not suggest youth and purity. She will wear all sweet, clear colors with no dull tint in them that tells of the past or probable future. No exaggeration of any kind should attract attention or take away the absorbing charm of her youth. No handsome materials or trimmings should be used, and no jewelry but if any, only pearls.

Or, this page I show some of my models for young girls' dresses, and that, I believe, bring out my points.

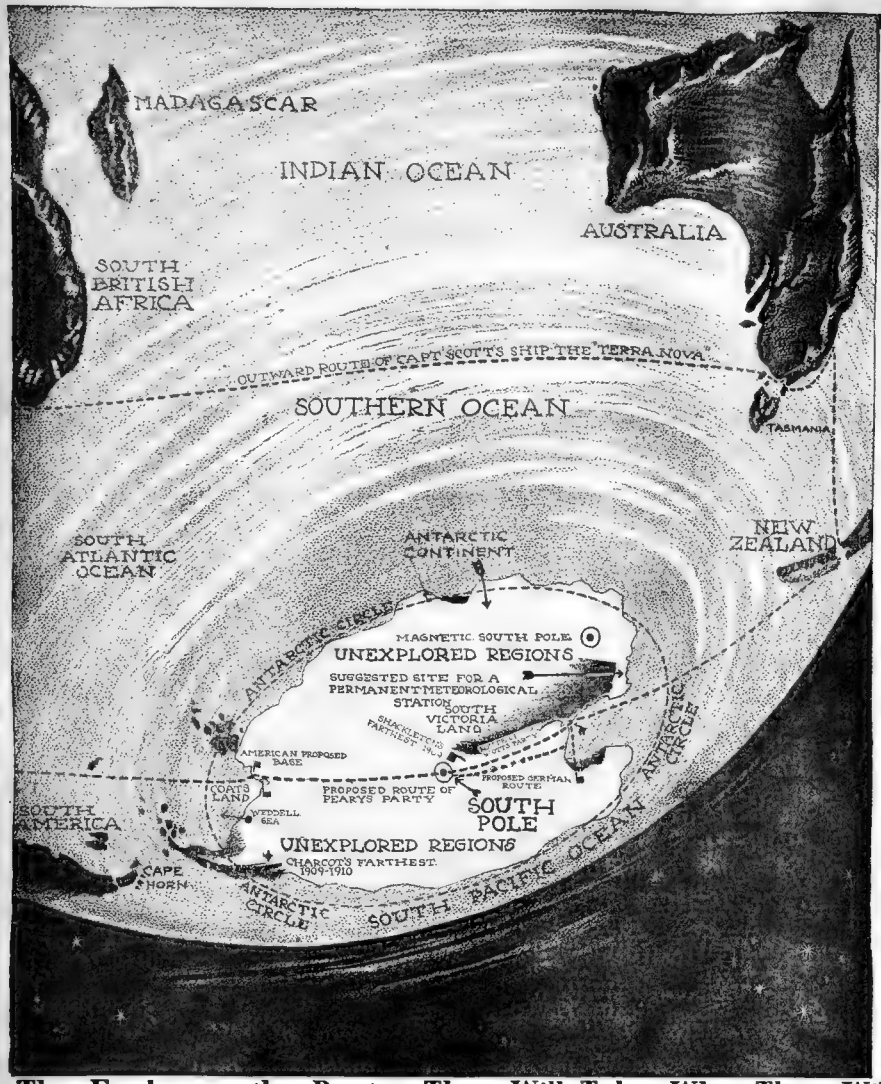
By SIR

The Man



Here On This Whirling Southern Axis of Earth Is the Biggest Game in the Most Stupendous Field and Protected by Every Inimical Force of Nature. It Is the South Pole.

THE race for the South Pole is, above all, a contest for a record

I think that even the scientific results to be obtained are subordinate in the minds of explorers to the excitement of the contest.

Deep in the heart of every full-blooded man is the desire to make a record.

To reach the hitherto unattainable is always of sentimental value from his standpoint. Here is a stupendous event in a tremendous field with everything against him. To have the honor of accomplishing what no other man has ever been able to do is, and always will be, sufficient incentive to impel men to risk their lives, and a dash to the South Pole is worth while from that standpoint alone.

Success would mean fame not only for the individual who accomplished the feat but for the nation whose representative he was.

It was all this which inspired me in my efforts to reach the Pole and which may one day induce me to undertake it again—provided no one else attains it before I enter the field again.

Once the Pole has actually been reached there will be little incentive for any one to repeat the feat, and it is doubtful whether it would ever be undertaken again.

If Captain Scott or any of the other explorers reaches the goal, I for one would no longer be interested enough to follow in his footsteps.

There isn't glory enough for more than one Pole "discoverer," from my standpoint at any rate, and unless I can be the first to get there I have no particular desire to get there at all.

Whether any minerals exist in the rocks of the Antarctic, as they are said to exist in the Arctic, is not definitely known, but unless they were as valuable as gold they would not be worth while working for. Whether gold exists there is not known, but it is by no means improbable, as I have seen rock there which is similar in every particular to the kind in which gold is found.

It is most probable, however, that there would be no great commercial advantage in the discovery of the Pole. The guano which is found in the Antarctic, and which is of a very good quality, is so mixed up with the rocks as to be extremely hard to get at, and for that reason hardly valuable commercially.

The Explorers, the Routes They Will Take, What They Will Find.

TEN expeditions to the South Pole have been planned.

Chief of them are those to be headed by Commander Peary's lieutenants, by Captain Scott, of the British Navy, and by Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton.

This race for the Pole will be the greatest sporting event ever undertaken.

Scott, Shackleton and Peary agree that it ought to be raced according to certain rules.

The chief rule is that when an explorer has once started over a certain route to the Pole, no one else must take the same route. As the Antarctic continent is three times the size of Europe, it would seem that there should be plenty of routes, but this is by no means certain.

Captain Scott appears to have discovered the best—perhaps the only practicable—route to the Pole in 1902. He disembarked on the Ross Sea, which lies south of New Zealand, and entered the Antarctic Continent near the Great Ice Barrier.

From here to the South Pole there is a generally smooth stretch of solid land, rising gradually to a height of 10,000 feet near the Pole. Scott made a farthest south record over this route in 1902, and Shackleton made his record over it in 1909.

Shackleton was entitled to use this route because he had been over it with Scott's original expedition, but he recognizes Scott's superior claim and will not start on another expedition until Scott has made his present attempt. Scott is now fitting out his expedition at Plymouth, in England.

The Americans propose to start from the Weddell Sea, on the opposite side of the continent from the Ross Sea. They have a perfect right to take their route to the Pole under the proposed rules of the game.

On the other hand, Professor Anschutz Kemp and other Germans say that it is perfect nonsense to claim that any one has an exclusive right to a Polar route, and that they will start wherever they please.

"It is just like British arrogance," the Germans say, "to claim that they have an exclusive right to a track across an unexplored continent. The level land over which Scott and Shackleton travelled is about a thousand miles wide at the start. Of course, in approaching the Pole our track must come near to the English. We may start from a different point on the same plateau as Scott but we claim a right to go where we please."

This attitude on the part of the Germans excites intense indignation in England.

Toward the United States the attitude is different. Captain Scott and Lieutenant Shackleton say: "We shall welcome the effort of our American brothers to co-operate with us in seeking the South Pole if they will start from the Weddell Sea."

Some observers explain this generosity on the part of the British by saying that it is practically impossible to reach the Pole from the Weddell Sea. In that region the Antarctic Continent is guarded by a network of islands, between which are channels more or less choked with ice. Here a thousand ships might be lost or driven back, whereas the Ross Sea offers a landing place where the explorers can always be certain of reaching the solid Antarctic Continent.

In discussing this point Captain Scott has written to Commander Peary:

"As far as I am concerned, the Weddell Sea would be an admirable base for an American expedition, and I should be extremely pleased if it can be organized in time to arrange a joint programme for magnetic and meteorological work.

"There is only one small difficulty in this connection and one that does not affect me personally. Some time ago Dr. Bruce wrote me that he intended to organize another Scottish expedition and go to the Weddell Sea. I think it is right I should tell you of his proposal, so that you may, if you think fit, consult him in the matter."

Dr. W. S. Bruce has since announced that he has no objections to the Americans using the Weddell Sea.

Commander Peary and the Peary Arctic Club have contributed $50,000 for financing an American expedition to the South Pole, and the National Geographical Society has begun to collect the remaining $25,000 needed. The ship Roosevelt, which carried Peary on his way to the North Pole, has been placed at the disposal of the Antarctic expedition.

Captain George Bartlett, George Borup, Professor McMillan and Doctor Goodsell, who were the ablest of Peary's assistants, and practically the whole of his crew, are ready to go. It is hoped that the expedition will leave America this Summer, so as to make the actual dash for the South Pole during the Antarctic Summer, which is simultaneous with our Winter. Only twenty men are needed.

The expedition is likely to learn a great deal about the Weddell Sea, which is inhabited by the Weddell seal; even if it does not reach the Pole. Nearly two thousand miles of an utterly unknown land of snow and ice would lie between the debarkation point and the Pole.

"Think of the two parties," said Commander Peary in a burst of eloquence, "the Americans coming from the Western Hemisphere, the English from the Eastern Hemisphere, each having started almost the same day, a year and a half before, from widely separated quarters of the globe, coming together at the South Pole, where the foot of man has never trod before."

Lieutenant Shackleton has been within 112 miles of the South Pole and knows approximately what the region is like. Three men made the final dash in the face of a blizzard blowing eighty miles and they were prevented from reaching the Pole only by physical exhaustion.

The South Pole is situated on an immense tableland between 10,000 and 11,000 feet high, extending for thousands of miles. It is higher and more extensive than any tableland in the world. As Shackleton found a blizzard blowing against him, it is possible that the Americans, coming from the other direction, may find it with them.

The Antarctic Continent as a whole is far higher than any other continent. It averages 6,000 feet high, which is nearly twice the height of Asia, although the latter includes the Himalaya range of mountains. In area the Antarctic Continent is about twice the size of Europe and about one-third smaller than North America.

The most peculiar fact about the Antarctic Continent is that there are no land mammals. Animals of the seal family abound in the waters, some of them very ferocious. Vast quantities of penguins, very amusing birds and unable to fly, divide their time between land and water.

Land animals, properly so called, are confined to insects and other low forms of life. Ticks grow to an enormous size. The great interior tableland is practically lifeless.

There are no trees in Antarctica. Fungi and other low forms of plant life grow to a large size on the fringe of the continent. There are no human natives.

The Great Ice Barrier, which is 5,000 feet deep and uncounted square miles in area, must be far larger than all the glaciers in the Arctic region put together.

The South Pole is part of a land mass, whereas the North Pole is in the midst of a sea. Although the South Pole is on a tableland, it really forms a point in the vast land mass of the globe. This point is the apex of a figure having four triangular sides. The North Pole is situated in the midst of the base of this figure.

It is easier to travel on the Antarctic Continent than in Arctic regions. Scott and Shackleton's experience has proved that automobile sleds and Manchurian ponies, instead of Eskimo dogs, are best for drawing supplies on the Antarctic land.

Many other expeditions to the Antarctic besides those mentioned are planned. Secretary Meyer proposes to send a navy expedition to Wilkes Land, first discovered by an American naval officer, to explore and take possession of it.

The American Museum of Natural History will send an expedition in honor of the late Morris K. Jesup to study the natural history of the region.

Captain Roland V. Webster, an Englishman has built a combination aeroplane and dirigible balloon, in which he will try to reach the Pole.

Henry Savage Landor, well known as the explorer of mysterious Thibet, will also make an attempt in a balloon. He has been at work for a year on a dirigible airship of the Zeppelin type.

Baron Matthiessen and Voltcheeck, of the Russian army, have purchased two large dirigible balloons and have equipped a ship, which they will use as a base of supplies.

Dr. Jean Charcot, the distinguished French scientist, who last year returned from an interesting expedition to the Antarctic Continent, is expected to make another effort in his splendidly equipped yacht, the Pourquoi Pas.

Several German expeditions are likely to go to the Antarctic Continent, as the Kaiser is deeply interested in the project.

The principal one is that planned by Lieutenant W. Filchner, of the German Navy. He is seeking to collect a fund of $500,000 for the purpose, and has already collected a considerable sum. He proposes not merely to make a dash for the Pole, but to carry on scientific work on a large scale. His aim will be to eclipse the exploits of Captain Scott, who represents the British Navy, and did very important scientific work on his first expedition.

It is now stated that Lieutenant Filchner will start from the Weddell Sea, but this would seem an infringement of the American rights under the rules, as the Americans have already announced their intention of making that their base.

Between the starting points chosen by the British and American explorers there are about three thousand miles of almost unexplored coast line, counting the shores of the Antarctic Continent in each direction.

At the two places chosen by the British and Americans, however, there are known to be fairly safe harbors and landing places. The English base will be at MacMurdo Sound, in Ross Sea, and the American base at Coats Land, in Weddell Sea.

All these facts about the Antarctic Continent we know chiefly from Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic," published by J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia.

It is one of the most interesting records of human effort ever written, showing how a handful of men, with meagre supplies, practically solved a problem that had hitherto baffled mankind for centuries. Shackleton's party went to the Antarctic Continent in a fifty-year-old whaling ship, which could hardly have been used for any other purpose.

He made his final dash southward with three men only, all of them carrying their own supplies.

His achievement certainly proves that it is possible to reach the Pole with a very small equipment, and this in itself ought to be a great encouragement to those who are entering the contest in a true sporting spirit.

If I ever go again, I shall use no other equipment than that I have hitherto employed. With more money at my disposal I could, of course, secure more of the same kind and I would not want any other.

Much interesting scientific work has been done on the Antarctic continent, but a great deal remains to be done.

In the domain of meteorology, continuous records have been taken of the movements of the upper currents of the atmosphere, which have a bearing upon the weather in more temperate countries. These records have still to be tabled and compared, and an immense amount of work remains to be done upon them. In the field of physical science, records have been taken of the Aurora Australis, and light will be thrown on this still obscure phenomenon

The attainment of the Magnetic Pole and the general magnetic work will have a very real value, not only in the increase of knowledge on the side of abstract science, but also in connection with navigation.

In connection with biology, the discovery of microscopical life in the frozen lakes is extremely interesting. The scientists of the expedition demonstrated that the tiny rotifers could exist in a temperature of 100° of frost, and also emerge unscathed from the test of a temperature of 200° F. It is expected that some former connection between New Zealand and Australia and the Antarctic continent may be traced when a comparison is made between the existing forms in these countries.

The marine collections made by the expedition are large and varied. Strange as it may seem, there is a large marine fauna in the icy waters of the Antarctic. The temperature of the sea in those regions varies but little in Winter and Summer, and this fact is conductive to an abundant marine life.

There is, of course, no way to foretell which nation will have the honor of reaching the South Pole first. The various expeditions which will make the attempt will all have a good chance.

Captain Robert Scott, the Englishman, will travel the route of former expeditions, including mine, which, we know, traverses a land continent covered with ice as hard as steel and on which there is very little snow. This may perhaps be somewhat of an advantage over the route the Americans will travel, which will lead into an entirely unexplored area, where they may meet either open water or vast, insurmountable mountains.

The success of the American expedition, however, will depend entirely upon the efficiency of its equipment, and as the Americans will not want for funds, there is no reason why they should not reach their goal.

The American expedition will find South Pole hunting a little different to Arctic exploration. The dogs which Peary used in the North will be less valuable in the Antarctic, because of the low-flying drift there, which will get in the dogs' eyes and render them powerless. I used ponies, and the Americans would have more success with them than with dogs.

Igloo-building, too, which characterized the North Polar expeditions of both Peary and Cook, will be out of the question in the South, because of the scarcity of snow. For that reason, the South Pole hunters will have to carry tents. They will find light, warm underwear more serviceable than the thick, heavy furs which they used in the North. When I was South I used furs only to protect my hands and feet.

The race for the Pole is, after all, a stupendous sporting event. But then the same idea animated Columbus and all the great discoverers. The good of it all depends afterward upon the ingenuity and genius of man.

The Rules of Pole-Hunting.

REALIZING that the discovery of the South Pole may be attended by the same sort of controversy which signalized the exploration of the North Pole, owing to the lack of any set of rules to regulate the rival explorers, the American Geographical Society of New York and the Royal Geographical Society of England are now seriously considering the promulgation of such a code.

The new rules of the game will be "hard and fast," and the penalty for their violation will be the rejection of the explorer's claims.

The librarian of the American Geographical Society has declared that the following rules would cover the situation:

RULE I.—Every explorer shall publicly announce his objective point before starting out.

RULE II.—No explorer shall follow a route laid out by another until it has been abandoned by the latter.

RULE III.—Members of an unsuccessful expedition shall obtain the consent of their leader before undertaking a similar expedition on their own account.

RULE IV.—No member of an expedition shall encroach upon the privileges of the leader

RULE V.—Explorers shall notify the world of their discoveries without unnecessary delay.

RULE VI.—No explorer shall consume the food or appropriate the supplies of another, unless compelled to do so for the preservation of life.

RULE VII.—No explorer shall destroy or conceal any evidence that another explorer has preceded him.

RULE VIII.—All proofs of claims shall be submitted promptly to all recognized scientific bodies without discrimination.

RULE IX.—All instruments used for taking observations shall be carefully preserved and submitted with proofs of discovery.

RULE X.—The credit for a discovery shall be awarded to the leader of an expedition, however many others may be with him.

The axis of In the new poles—suppose that the tipping took ete ir tion place in such a direction that the South Pole advanced to equator the Equator in the longitude of Quito, in Ecuador. Then ould the Isthmus of Panama would lie within the new Antarctic ametic circle, and New Orleans would be almost as near to the new South Pole as Mts. Erebus and Terror are to the South Pole of the present day. New York would be nearer the South Pole by ten degrees than it now is to the North Pole.

The new North Pole would be at the Island of Sumatra, in the East Indies, and all the hot seas and lands of that part of the globe would become polar, and soon be buried in eternal ice and snow. The mighty Himalaya Mountains would rise on the borders of the new Arctic circle, and would become the scene of the wonderful phenomena of the midnight sun, which we now go to Norway to witness.

At the same time the North Cape, northern Siberia, northern Alaska and Greenland, on the one side, and the Antarctic Continent and its surroundings on the other, would burn under a tropical sun and bloom with equatorial life

The hemispheres of the globe, as we now know them, would be revolutionized. The southern hemisphere would have its centre in the heart of the Andes, in South America, while the northern hemisphere would centre in the East Indies.

But these revolutions would be entirely different if the tipping took place in such a way as to place the new poles at different points on the Equator than those which we have chosen. The new South Pole might, for instance, be situated in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, and the new North Pole in the Gulf of Guinea.

There is a multitude of scientific reasons why this theory will probably never receive the support of scientific men, and yet the unexplained fact remaining that the polar regions were once inhabited by tropical forms of life. And we know also that the axis of the earth, even to-day is not absolutely steady, but wobbles a little, and it has been thought that this wobbling may arise in part from the lack of balance caused by the great weight of the lofty ice-covered continent of the far South.

On the other hand, it has been solemnly argued that when the axis tipped over the whole earth changed its position with it. This is illustrated in the accompanying diagrams

The sudden extinction of the mammoths in Siberia has been attributed to the change of the equatorial to the polar regions

The fact that the earth's axis is constantly shifting means that neither the South Pole nor the North Pole remains always in the same place. Consequently, an explorer may start for a place located in advance as the the South Pole and find when he gets to the spot that the Pole has gone

Then there is a possibility that one expedition will find the Pole at one place in one year, that another will find it in another place the next year, and that both will come back to civilization together and report having located the Pole in different places

Will the Persistent Duke Win Katherine Elkins Now?

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Aosta, with Her Crew of Wild Natives, Travelling up the Congo.

African Princess, in the Silk Hat of Ceremony, Paying a Visit to the Duchess Miss Katherine Elkins, Whose Marriage to the Duke of the Abruzzi Was Strenuously Opposed by His Sister-in-Law, the Duchess of Aosta.

WILL the Duke of the Abruzzi win Miss Katherine Elkins after all? At last one serious obstacle to the run on his bank has been removed. The Duchess of Aosta, wife of the Duke's eldest brother, who offered the most serious opposition to the marriage in the Italian royal family council, has been exiled from Italy by illness.

The Duchess has consumption, and it is feared that she must succumb within a short time. She has a ready resentment against part of two years in Africa, during her time between Egypt and the wild interior of the Continent. She is now wishing in East Africa not far from the scene of Mr. Roosevelt's exploits.

The prolonged stay in Africa has not cured the Duchess, and she will have to go to a large town for an indefinite period to come. She will spend her Winters in Africa and her Summers at some Italian mountain resort for its altitude until a marked change for better or worse occurs.

As a factor in the family council she is eliminated. The excitement of discussing the project of an American marriage would be dangerous to her health. It is feared that her life may come to a sudden end at any moment.

The Duchess is a very handsome and spirited woman. In spite of her illness she has lately been shooting hippopotami and other wild beasts with great success. She visits exclusively in the African jungles with bands of natives dressed in feathers. She is very tall and finely built, considerably above the height of an ordinary man and few persons would have supposed a few years ago that she was in danger of consumption. She is an unusually interesting and attractive Princess. It is well known that the late Duke of Clarence, eldest son of King Edward, and consequently destined heir to the throne of England, was deeply in love with her. The great match was abandoned simply because she would have had to become a Protestant, and neither she nor her family would consent to this. She is, therefore, accustomed to the idea that personal desires must yield to other considerations in planning

She was Princess Helene of Orleans, a member of the French royal family of Bourbon. Although belonging to a dethroned family, she probably considers herself superior to the house of Savoy, which she has married, for the Bourbons have the most splendid history in Europe while the occupants of the throne of Italy have but recently emerged from obscurity.

Her husband, the Duke of Aosta, is the eldest first cousin of the king of Italy, and when the Duchess married him he was regarded as the heir to the throne [illegible] King, who was very delicate. [illegible] had caused it to be known that he would never marry. Consequently she had every reason to expect that she would become Queen one day, and her eldest son King in due course. To everybody's surprise the king married in middle life and has a small family, including a son and heir. This must have been a severe disappointment to the Duchess, and may even have affected her health.

When the Duke of the Abruzzi wished to marry Miss Katherine Elkins, he was obliged to ask the King's consent to the marriage, in order that his wife might share in royal rank. The King said that the Duke must first obtain the family consent to the project.

Bitter opposition to the marriage was immediately shown in the royal family. Next in influence and first in sharing this opposition was the Dowager Queen Margherita, a widow of the late King Humbert. She is of fine character and enjoys great popularity in Italy. She declared that the marriage would be a [illegible] to the Duke and that while she had [illegible] feelings toward Miss Elkins [illegible] could never be [illegible] the duties [illegible] Italian Duchess. [illegible] been received [illegible] and dignity the Queen [illegible] said: [illegible] the Dowager [illegible] was An[illegible] the Duke of Aosta [illegible] marriage, and [illegible] spirited wife [illegible] energy.

These expressions of her feelings were [illegible] arguments of considerable [illegible] from a worldly point of view.

In the [illegible] of most forces [illegible] there was a disposition opposed to the American marriage. The King [illegible] attitude of disapproval of the family [illegible] lodge and [illegible] not take [illegible].

Now, as we have seen, the Duchess of Aosta has been removed from the situation by illness. On top of this comes the announcement that Dowager Queen Margherita is [illegible] serious illness and is likely to take an active part in the family affairs in future.

This apparently gives the Duke of the Abruzzi an opportunity of resuming his courtship with the prospect of a happy ending. The world cannot believe that two such high spirited, high-minded young people will forget the love they have exchanged or abandon the plans they have cherished.

We have often heard that the course of true love never runs smooth, and [illegible] these proposals [illegible] been amply demonstrated in [illegible] present case and the world is now waiting to see the second [illegible]

Should the Duke [illegible] has covered himself with [illegible] of his darling, he [illegible] and the sum

but of Mount McKinley, who has won a North Pole record, who has explored the untrodden heights of the Mountains of the Moon, who has just reached the highest point in the Himalayas will not abandon his suit for the girl of his choice because there are some obstacles in the way.

Is an American beauty and heiress worth less persistency than a mountain climbing record?

Already the obstacles are falling or yielding and there can be little doubt that they will all vanish if the lover holds to his purpose.

If he gives up the pursuit, people will certainly have less admiration than they have previously had for his daring, and many achievements.

There is perhaps a peculiar significance in the fact that the Duke has recently ascended Bride's Peak in the Himalayas to a height of 24,583 feet. This is the highest mountain climbing record ever achieved by man, although the peak is not the highest.

Bride's Peak forms part of the vast mass of mountains, the highest peak of which is Mount Everest. It was the Duke's intention to climb Mount Everest but he was stopped on Bride's Peak which adjoins it, by a terrible snowstorm, in which he and his companions could not see for days. No one has yet been within 5,000 feet of the summit of Mount Everest, which is 29,750 feet high. The Duke may yet try for it. It is certainly the most stupendous exploring feat that has yet been attempted.

The approach to the great peaks was made over a terrifying, barren tableland exceeding for hundreds of miles and having for the greater part an elevation of 10,000 feet.

At last the explorers reached the actual base of the great peaks. A camp was established at Rongbuk on a grassy spur extending over the glacier at a height of 17,000 feet. The Duke left the majority of his natives here and set out with a selected party for the great heights.

After marching for four days over the glacier at a rate of ten miles, they found themselves at the foot of the immense unexplored pyramidal peak known as Bride's Peak.

After several hours it was cleared away, revealing it 2 in all its grandeur. The Duke explored the base of the mountain and found that it was so steep as to make avalanches inevitable and to bring almost certain death to any who should try to ascend it.

The Duke then turned his attention to Bride's Peak, which the natives call Shogolion. The marches became extremely arduous. The thin atmosphere, which the members of the expedition had been breathing for many days began to show its depressing effects. Work required three times the amount of effort that would have been needed at ordinary levels.

The Duke's companions began to lose their appetite. The unchanging diet of canned meat palled on them. The Duke, however, maintained his health and strength apparently unimpaired.

He and his three companions—the Marquis Negrotto, Signor Stella and Signor Filippi—reached the foot of Bride's Peak together. The three men remained at the base for scientific and photographic work and the Duke himself made the ascent with three guides.

In two successive days' marches they went up 2,000 feet. They were obliged to stop for hours when thick mists [illegible] every moment [illegible] In [illegible] falling masses of [illegible] to mention [illegible] in their [illegible] of the perilous [illegible]

They waited until three in the afternoon. The [illegible] unusually clear and [illegible] the three mountaineers turned back [illegible] the Duke. The [illegible] was lost in a gray whirling mist.

"It is impossible to go further," said the Duke. "We must be lucky if we are able to return."

If he had kept up [illegible] was out of [illegible]

The Duke [illegible] eyes toward the peak [illegible] which he could no longer [illegible] It is known by [illegible] to be 25,110 feet. He was standing at a height of 24,583 feet. Perhaps he was regretting that he could not ascend to the very summit, although he had already attained the highest point yet reached by man.

Perhaps he has thinking of another summit he had failed to reach.

In any case the Duke never expresses violent emotion. We know from his companion's report that he merely said in a calm tone:

"Let us descend."

It was five days' march back to the camp, where he had left the scientific members of his party. The journey was accomplished without mishap.

The previous record for mountain climbing was 24,000 feet, made by Norman mountaineers on Mount Kabru in the Sikkim range in 1907.

The Joke of Russian Reform

EVERYBODY has heard of the Russian Douma—that recently created legislative body which is supposed to limit the powers of the autocrat, but which is promptly snuffed out and replaced by another whenever it attempts any real reforms.

Well, there are just now signs of a coming reform when the latest Douma is considering just as seriously as though it was not a joke. Bishop Eulogius, a member of the Douma, like most people in St. Petersburg at this time of year, recently bought a pair of rubber shoes. Imprinted on the inner side of the soles his High Holiness found the trade mark of the makers, consisting of a cross and a crown. That an orthodox bishop should walk about trampling at every step on the emblem of autocracy and the sign of orthodoxy filled him with horror. He refused to wear his new galoshes.

In the hall of the Douma are daily deposited the four hundred pairs of rubbers belonging to the members. A resident investigation of these indispensable arctics proved to him that at least half the members were trampling on crosses and crowns. Evidently the evil was widespread and cried out for remedy. He talked the matter over with a layman belonging to one of the straitest sects of nonconformists, and together they addressed a formal complaint to the Minister of Commerce.

That gentleman replied that he entirely sympathized with their point of view, and requested them to send him a formal report on the subject.

The bishop and the nonconformist are now engaged on this work and in due course the Government will take action: these rubber shoes will be reformed.

Mosquito, Not Luxury, Which Overturned the n Empire, Says Professor Wheeler, of Harvard.

"UNDOUBTEDLY the introduction of malaria from Egypt and Asia was the cause of the decline and fall of ancient Greece, tion of ancient Rome. Nearly one-half the entire population of Greece to-day is malaria infected, and the other half is not largely because by previous long attacks it has become immune.

The Roman Empire then reached the height of its power and glory, but its decay set in at the same time. Thousands of Roman soldiers returned to Italy with their veins filled with the malaria poison. The mosquitoes always abundant in the marshes of Italy, sucked the poison from them and conveyed it to the rest of the population. The whole race was poisoned and lost its vigor.

Vigorous races from the cold parts of the world, uninfected by malaria— Goths, Vandals, Huns—swarmed down upon Italy and the poor diseased Romans were too weak to struggle against them.

The neglect of agriculture in Italy also favored the spread of the mosquito and malaria. Agriculture made drainage necessary, and for this reason there could be little malaria. But so much wealth flowed from other countries into the metropolis of the world that the cultivation of the fields was neglected and to a great extent abandoned. Farms were deserted, and wide areas formerly devoted to the raising of grain and vegetables were left to produce only one crop—namely, mosquitoes. The land being no longer drained immense tracts became uninhabitable. The end was hastened by the abandonment of the drainage works in the Roman Campagna, created during the efficient period of the empire. The Campagna thus became the worst breeding place of malaria in Italy, a blight under which the city of Rome has struggled from then to the present day.

The fall of Rome was slow, for the last Emperor, Romulus Augustus, was deposed in 476 A. D. During all those hundreds of years we know from Professor Wheeler, of Harvard, the Anopheles mosquito was pursuing his deadly work. The United States has apparently reached the height of its power and glory, like Rome in the days of Augustus Cæsar, Malaria infests the country from end to end. Is it possible that we shall gradually sink under its burden, that the Northern European stock, which we possess so large a share, will be slowly enfeebled and vitiated by it.

The United States Government has for some years realized the importance of fighting malaria by fighting the mosquito. But it is equally desirable to fight the disease directly, for if there were no infected persons, the mosquito could not carry the disease. Sick persons should be kept carefully beyond the reach of mosquitoes.

To perform the task of exterminating the disease and the mosquito thoroughly requires the co-operation of all the governments of the world. The United States Government is now seeking to secure this co-operation. A mild form of quarantine for malarial persons would be desirable. States and municipalities must also work in suppressing the pest. In New Jersey the work has been taken up with great earnestness and the prospect is that before very long the Great Plague over a large portion of the State will be to a great extent eliminated.

The use of petroleum for the destruction of mosquitoes is no longer so highly recommended as it was half a dozen years ago. A very small quantity will spread over a large area of pond and, forming a thin film, will kill by suffocation all the "wrigglers" which the water may contain. So far, so good. But it is only of temporary service, because the oil evaporates and is carried off by every rain, thus demanding frequent repetitions of the dose.

Very effective, indeed, when introduced into ponds, are certain species of minnows, which feed habitually upon the larvæ of mosquitoes. Such little fishes, about the size of a lady's little finger, do a vast deal of valuable work in the salt marshes along the New Jersey coast. Were it not for them, in fact, the mosquito plague in that State would be greatly worse than it is. They make their home in

Let me also address to you a few words of advice. In making [illegible] remember that the chief difference between good cake and bad is the [illegible] for beating up the ingredients. A fine-grained, tough cake is the result of not beating it thoroughly enough.

Use good materials, fresh butter and eggs, good sugar and well-sifted flour.

At this season when preparations are [illegible] ful of cream of tartar, one-half cup [illegible] glasses of white wine, eight ounces currants.

Mix into the flour the same weight of sifted sugar. Rub into it the [illegible] butter until it is as fine as grated bread. Add next the eggs, well beaten, the wine, and, last, the orange flower water. Beat well and stir in the currants, which have been washed and [illegible] them out to [illegible] dried. Butter the cake pan and fill half of it. Bake in a quick oven about [illegible] an hour.

Neapolitan Cake.

ONE pound flour, ten ounces sweet almonds [illegible] ounces bitter almonds, peel of two lemons, three-quarters of a pound sifted sugar, one teaspoonful orange flower water, three-quarters pound butter, yolks of four eggs.

Pound the sweet and bitter almonds in a mortar to a smooth paste. Mix them with the flour and butter broken into pieces. Rub the sugar on the peel of the lemons. Pound fine and add it to the flour and [illegible] mixing well together and softening [illegible] the yolks of the eggs.

Roll the paste about [illegible] inch thick, [illegible] with a floured [illegible] pan and bake [illegible] in a slow oven. When cold, ice with [illegible] dredged with sugar. When firm take [illegible] which have been washed and [illegible] them out [illegible] and [illegible] on one side.

"Charges the Blood With Oxygen"

BLOOD, red blood, means joyous health, when it rose tide and rippling from the ends of the fingers to the tips of the toes and everywhere actively attacking little or dead waste, poisonous odds and ends that the body is always accumulating, and washing them away as a spring rain washes away the refuse of winter.

But to be thus red and alive, the blood must be charged with that life giving element—Oxygen.

Without oxygen the blood is blue, sluggish and weak. With it oxygen it is unable to clean up and haul away the hundreds of tissue cavities of the body. Without oxygen the poisonous [illegible] will keep on collecting and causing these losses until pus, soon some poison will begin to ooze out of one of these festering spots. Then back goes all the stuff, to flow a black, muddy current of disease through the whole body.

To be well, then, give your blood oxygen. Oxygen cannot be given as a drug or by means of drugs.

The only successful method ever discovered for oxygenating the blood is the Oxygenator.

By means of this new, natural, drugless, home treatment, the body is "pressurized" and becomes at once a strong attractive for the free oxygen which abounds in the air about us. This oxygen is drawn to the body and absorbed through every one of its tiny pores in the skin. It saturates the blood, burns up its impurities, opens up the capillaries and gives every part of the body, alike a thorough blood cleaning, until complete health and vigor are restored.

Below are a few of the most common diseases which are cured daily by means of the OXYGENATOR:

Rheumatism

Rheumatism is poisonous waste, uric acid [illegible] decomposing in the delicate nerve tissues. These impurities can not be got at with poisonous drugs or external applications. They must be dried and put to sweeter and wash them away [illegible] the kidneys for elimination.

Constipation

Constipation is simply waste matter in the colon and lower intestines becoming [illegible] dries, it wastes away. Later in the year, have the blood fed with oxygen. It will wash out the poison, relieve the congestion, and establish a [illegible] condition.

Stomach

When your stomach is out of order it will not blood to the [illegible] it will make it churn more vigorously and soon, as the gastric juices [illegible] of oxygenated blood to [illegible] immediately relieve all the [illegible] and cause indigestion.

Nerve Trouble

Your nerves [illegible] so powerful, are simply [illegible] because they [illegible] the impurities in the blood. [illegible] relieve them of the [illegible] with which they are [illegible].

The Oxygenator has never failed that very thing in thousands of cases, with all manner of [illegible] declared incurable. Convince yourself of this by sending for our Book of Records of these cases. Many are just like your own. If you are really anxious to get well send for this book and also our Colds, Catarrh, Etc.

These troubles are due to stagnant [illegible] of weak blood, which [illegible] festering secretions and drooping [illegible] to collect in the head cavities and throat faster than they can be removed. But, oxygenated blood is [illegible] cure.

Lungs

When you have plenty of vital, pure blood flowing into all the little cells of the lung, they are well. Hence the value of fresh air because it keeps the blood pure with its oxygen. The same oxygen can be obtained with the Oxygenator.

Blood Poison

Nowhere is the power of oxygen so plain as in cases of blood poison. It quickly attacks the blood toxins, impurities, burns up the refuse and washes it away for complete elimination.

The Free Book on Oxygenating explains exactly how the oxygen fed to the blood in the Oxygenator is one the most effective destroyer of free poisons, blood poisons, liver congestion, skin impurities etc.

Send for the Free Book on Oxygenating, which explains all about the Oxygenator. The very possibility of its doing you good would make it a shame not to investigate. We will refer you to our agent in your city or town.

Write to-day. We will also send you a copy of our monthly magazine, The Searchlight, free of charge.

DAME FASHION has created no end of pretty things for the little folks this season, but nothing quainter than this little model has appeared for some time. The front and back are cut in one piece, and it suggests the princess effect.

The skirt is shirred at the upper edge, but may be simply gathered if preferred. The sleeves are in the fashionable kimono style, and the neck is cut low enough to slip on easily over the head. Green-colored challie was used for the making, trimmed with ribbon-run beading.

The model is equally suitable for the light-weight woollens and the wash fabrics, such as linen and pique.

I THINK YOU'RE TOO SMALL TO LEARN TO SKATE
I WANTA

WHEN SOME PEOPLE WANT A THING, THAT SETTLES IT. THEY DONT STOP TO THINK OF THE CONSEQUENCES
YOU ARE ONLY A BEGINNER, YOU'D BETTER TRY ONE AT A TIME

WAIT A MINUTE THATS NOT THE WAY

POOR CHAP - HERE'S A HANDKERCHIEF
DONT CRY OLD MAN EVERYTHING STARTS THAT WAY, BE A SPORT

ME A SPORT NOW
FINE SPORT

YOU DIDN'T GET THE IDEA

BUSTER, GET A LASSO
BETTER GET A NET
POOR BOY
ME DONE IT ADAIN

10
YOU DIDN'T DO IT QUITE RIGHT

11
I'M LAUGHING AT BUSTER
HANG IT, OLD MAN, BE A SPORT. YOU INSISTED ON SKATING, NOW DONT KICK.

12

RESOLVED

THAT SINCE HE WAS ADVISED NOT TO SKATE HE HAS NO RIGHT TO KICK AT THE CONSEQUENCES. IF YOU WILL PUT YOUR HAND INTO THE FIRE YOU MUST EXPECT TO GET BURNT. IF YOU WILL INSIST ON BEING CROSS AND UGLY DONT COMPLAIN THAT NO ONE LIKES YOU. IF YOU WILL GET ON A SKATE DONT COMPLAIN AT GETTING A HEADACHE. IF YOU WANT TO GAMBLE AWAY YOUR MONEY AND YOUR HEALTH AND YOUR TIME BE READY TO WAKE UP SOME DAY AND FIND MONEY GONE, HEALTH GONE, OPPORTUNITIES GONE, AND TAKE YOUR MEDICINE. THE MAN WHO READ GOOD BOOKS, STAYED ON THE JOB, CUT OUT THE "GAB-FEST" AND USED HIS BRAINS WONT HAVE ANY KICK COMING WHEN THE GREY HAIRS ARRIVE
